FORMER BROCKTON GIRL SLAIN BY 'RIPPER'

SIX SINN FEINERS EXECUTED BY BRITISH

ORGANIST BEATEN TO DEATH BY MANIAC

Mrs. Edith Marshall Wilson of Perth Amboy, N. J., Found Murdered in Field

Perth Amboy, N. J., March 14.—A few blond hairs clutched in the hands of pretty Mrs. Edith Marshall Wilson, church organist, and former Brockton, Mass., girl, form the main clew police are working on today in running down the slayer of the young woman, whose brutally mutilated body was found in a lot less than 100 feet from her home late Saturday night.

Horror and indignation are at white heat as a result of the brutal slaying, which was one of the dreaded "Jack the Ripper" kind.

Not a weapon was used in killing the pretty organist. The police believe she was literally brained and torn limb from limb with the naked fists of a physical giant with the impulse of a maniac.

Mrs. Edith Marshall Wilson came here with her mother four years ago from Brockton, Mass., and was universally popular for her beauty, talents and good nature. She was twenty-eight years old.

Saturday night she left her home

The quotations of gasoline are now, Standard 29 cents, Jersey 29 cents, Texaco 30 cents.

PERMITS FOR 5 GARAGES IN SUBURBS ARE ISSUED

Garages got the upper hand of dwellings again during the week after a temporary setback. Boston building department records show. Five garages costing $1,400 are to be added to the suburban sections in comparison with one single-family dwelling. The latter is being constructed for Ethel A. McPhail at No. 30 Falkland terrace, Brighton, at a cost of $5,000. A temporary fruit store and a boiloom constituted all the rest of the building activity of the week for which permits were sought.

SEMINARY PUPIL IN SUICIDE ATTEMPT

Ruth Brown, Sixteen-Year-Old Arlington Girl, Takes Poison Pills

Brockton, March 14.—Ruth Brown of Arlington, sixteen-year-old student at Howard Seminary in West Bridgewater, attempted suicide here by taking pills containing poison.

She is in a serious condition at Brockton Hospital, but is expected to recover.

According to hospital officials and Dr. John M. Murphy of this city, the girl has admitted taking the poison, but refused to disclose or discuss her motives.

She came from the seminary yesterday to attend services in St. Patrick's Church here and became ill during the service.

Dr. Murphy was summoned and the girl was taken into the rectory for first aid treatment.

Dr. Murphy stated today Miss Brown finally confessed that the poison from which she was suffering was self administered.

At the hospital she at first refused to make the same admission, but when it seemed for a time she was going to die it is stated she confessed.

Miss Brown is pretty, healthy and apparently of well-to-do people.

At Howard Seminary officials refused to discuss the attempted suicide beyond admitting that the girl was a student there.

Four men went to the assistance of the injured man and called a doctor, who pronounced Paradise dead, his skull being fractured by the fall against the wall. Martin surrendered and was released in $2,000 bail.

Probe Into Death of Mrs. Fountain

State Chemist's Examination to Determine if West Brookfield Woman Died From Poison.

WOMAN CHURCH HEAD KILLED BY ACCIDENT

Police Experts Find Mrs Poore's Death Due to Fall in Elevator Well

Homicide experts from police headquarters, after investigation today, decided that the death of Mrs. Emma C. Poore, leader of the New Thought Church, who died at the City Hospital following a fall down the elevator shaft at Huntington Chambers, No. 2 Huntington avenue, was accidental.

Inspector James Dennessey, who conducted the inquiry, announced he was satisfied that the woman had stepped into the shaft believing that the elevator car which she had left a few moments before was still in place.

According to statements of relatives and friends, said Inspector Dennessey, Mrs. Poore had gone in the elevator to a conference with some medical students on the second floor of the building. She left the car and went into a room that opened off the entrance hall.

After talking for a few moments, she is believed to have backed out of the door and into the elevator shaft, pitching to her death on the concrete flooring below.

WOMAN'S BODY FOUND IN SACK IN RIVER

Belton, Tex., March 14.—The headless and legless body of a young woman tied securely in a sack is at the morgue here today and search is being made for the slayer. Fishermen who found the body in Little River dragged the river today in an effort to find the head and legs.

Ware, March 14.—Investigation of the mysterious death of Mrs. Noelia Fountain proceeded slowly today, pending a report from the state chemist, who was making an examination of the woman's digestive organs.

This examination will be concluded soon. It is expected it will show conclusively whether Noelia Fountain was poisoned, as she said in a dying statement she suspected she was.

Raymond R. Fountain, the woman's husband, continues to live with the new wife he took within a month of her mysterious death.

They are staying at the home of Fountain's new parents-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. George A. Russell of West Main street.

Fountain is superintending a summer job in West Brookfield, and attends work daily.

Mrs. Fountain died at her home in West Brookfield about a month ago. Her death was listed in the records of Brookfield as due to convulsions.

About three weeks after burial the authorities exhumed the body. It was learned later that this was due to a statement by Arthur G. Desforges, the woman's brother, who said she told him before she died she feared she had been poisoned.

This statement was made public about the time Fountain took another wife, and the two developments, coming together, caused a tremendous sensation in this section.

The employes' representatives have been holding meetings, but conferences with the management probably will not begin before April 1.

TWO CASES OF SMALLPOX IN GLOUCESTER

Second Victim Found in Apartment and Office Building—Teachers Quarantined

Gloucester, March 14.—Today the Board of Health announced the discovery of another case of smallpox in the Bradford building, which is used as an apartment and office structure for housing school teachers and business men.

The new patient is Andrew Strausse, a lodger. Health authorities, who have traced his movements, say there is no doubt that he contracted the disease by contact with Benjamin Anderson, the first smallpox victim discovered here since the outbreak of the epidemic in Salem.

Three high school teachers, who also were exposed to the disease have been placed under quarantine, and other tenants of the Bradford building are being watched by officials.

The discovery of these two cases has brought to an end the dispute between Dr. P. P. Moore of the health board and Mayor Wheeler over the opening of the contagious hospital. When the disease appeared in Salem two weeks ago the doctor insisted upon preparing the contagious hospital for use. Mayor Wheeler opposed this "until the hospital shall be needed." The fight was carried to the municipal council which upheld the doctor.

The disease was introduced in Salem by a gang of masons returning home from Jamaica, where they had been employed.

SEEK AID OF COURT TO FORCE PAYMENT

Ponzi Trustees Fight to Recover Money He Paid While Insolvent

The first move to recover from Ponzi investors the original investments on which they received no interest, was made today when the receivers filed eleven bills of complaint in the Federal Court.

Those named in the complaints were Edward Ashton, Methuen, $100; Antonio Bendi, Lawrence, $100; Nellie Brodeur, Methuen, $300; Margaret A. Black, Lawrence, $125; Fred Broadbent, Methuen, $1,000; Annie Broadhurst, Methuen, $150; Hrosti A. Anderson, Lawrence, $1,000; E. A. Anderson, Andover, $100; John E. Arnfield, Lawrence, $1000; Albert Anderton, Lawrence, $400; Dorothy M. Barchel, Lawrence, $1,140.

In filing the complaints, the recoverers, William R. Sears, James A. Lowell and Edward A. Thurston, declared that Ponzi was insolvent when these payments were made.

They asked that the payments be declared fraudulent and be ordered set aside. They also asked that a decree be entered requiring the defendants to pay back to the trustees the amounts they received, together with interest from July 13, 1920, to date of their payment.

Accompanying each complaint was a copy of the original note, in which Ponzi agreed to pay 50 per cent. in 90 days. The bill stated that at the time of the transfer of the money, shortly before the crash, Ponzi was insolvent.

It claimed that the payments were a part of the property of Ponzi, the effect of them being to enable the defendants to obtain a greater percentage of their debts than other creditors of Ponzi, and the defendants had reasonable cause to believe that said transfer would have such effect.

on Centre street shortly after 7 o'clock to buy some bread for the family larder and some silk stockings for herself.

She made the purchases. The silk stockings had been ripped from their covering and lay in grotesque fashion beside the body when it was found.

Mrs. Wilson after making the purchases met Miss Rae Frankel, a friend. And they went to a movie after.

It was 9:30 when they left the theatre and it was raining heavily.

When umbrellas raised, the girls stopped in front of the Simpson M. E. Church, where Mrs. Wilson was organist.

FOLLOWED BY MAN.

"It's just as well it is raining," said Mrs. Wilson, laughing, as she started for home. "I will have to go to bed early, and I have a difficult program in the church tomorrow."

That was the last time she was seen alive by friend or acquaintance. A woman has told the police a girl resembling Mrs. Wilson passed her further up the street and a man described himself from a party of four to follow her. It has not been established, however, that this was her slayer.

UMBRELLA OVER PACK.

Shortly after midnight the dogs set up a melancholy dirge from the lot which drew human being to investigate.

The body lay in the mud, as if it had been stamped there. Her umbrella was open. It had been placed so that it concealed her white face from passersby in the street.

Wounds there were in plenty but no sign of a weapon. There has been a brief, terrible struggle in the darkness, under the pouring rain. The high heels of the woman's shoes and the broad heels of a man's boots were marked all over the place.

Mrs. Wilson's hat had been torn off, her clothing was ripped. Her pocketbook of merchandise had been torn open and their contents investigated.

DIED OF FRIGHT.

There was a slight fracture of the skull, evidently caused by a blow to the base of the brain. There was a mark on the right temple. There were other marks, made by powerful, grasping fingers.

Physicians are inclined to believe that it was not the terrible mauling she received, but heart failure from fright that actually caused the organist's death.

Apparently she was seized as she passed along the street, a minute after leaving Miss Franke, and dragged into the vacant lot.

There were evidences that while the attack was the work of a perverted maniac, he robbed the woman as an afterthought. A watch and diamond circlet had been stripped from her body.

COUPLE LIVED APART.

Mrs. Marshall is in a state of collapse and was not told until today of the circumstances under which her daughter met her death.

Mrs. Wilson was married to Harvey Wilson, a chemical broker, three years ago. They were not living together, because of religious differences. Wilson was almost as popular as he is here, being a famous basketball player.

Reference to the tragedy was made in sermons of the leading churches, in most of which the musician had played the organ at one time or another.

Detectives are investigating the circumstances surrounding a similar "Jack the Ripper" slaying in West New Brighton a few weeks ago, to see whether it may have been the work of the same man.

Kansas Ousts Burton; Done with Reform

Topeka, Kan., March 14—Time was not so long ago when Kansas was a fertile field for every new reform movement under the sun. It was in Kansas the abolitionists had their bow-wows and sent John Brown on his long march toward the rising sun.

And it was in Kansas the prohibitionists cantered about their Carrie Nation, and the State boasted of a not a few Socialist leaders in late years.

But when J. Ralph Burton came to trust Band Saturday to head the anti-non-partisan movement he was escorted from the county and told Kansas was through with reform, drouths and grasshoppers. Mr. Burton was reported to be at Stafford, in an adjoining county today, unharmed.

6 SINN FEINERS EXECUTED IN IRELAND

Business Suspended in Dublin and Thousands Surround Mountjoy Prison

ran, who were convicted of participating in the killing of British officers in this city on November 21—"Bloody Sunday"—were executed first.

The executions caused a tremendous sensation and have had the effect of quelling talk of further peace negotiations for the time being.

PRAY AT PRISON.

Business was at a standstill. Even the postoffice was closed. Outside of Mountjoy prison thousands were gathered. Many knelt in prayer, and sobs and cries of lamentation filled the air.

Inside the prison, within a few hundred feet of the spot where the six condemned men met their death, was Arthur Griffith, Sinn Fein member of parliament, Vice-President of the Irish republic and head of the Sinn Fein organization. He is a prisoner.

Attempts to secure a reprieve for the six republicans failed. Word was received from London early today that the home office and the Irish office would not interfere. The authorities then made the final arrangements for the executions.

It was decided that the men should be hanged in pairs, beginning at 6 o'clock. After Wheelan and Moran, the others of the condemned men were ordered to their doom at 7 o'clock, and an hour later, at 8 o'clock, the final couple met death.

UNION LEADER.

The highest feeling was aroused over the execution of Moran, who was formerly head of the union of grocery clerks in Dublin. His friends declared that he had been convicted before British military court on the slimsiest kind of evidence, and that the testimony of his friends, who swore to an alibi, was disregarded.

Wheelan had two brothers in the United States. One of them is said to be a soldier in the American army.

Wheelan was accused of shooting an English officer to death on the morning of "Bloody Sunday," but evidence was given at the court-martial that he was attending mass at the time he was alleged to have committed the murder.

The other four condemned men, Thomas Bryan, Bernard Ryan, Frank P. Flood and Patrick Doyle, were accused of participating in an ambush of British soldiers and policemen.

The scenes about the prison presented the deepest pathos. Bonne had erected tiny altars upon which candles burned while mourners prostrated themselves and wept and prayed.

Crowded closely to the prison yard was Mrs. Wheelan, aged mother of one of the doomed men. She had come from Connemara in County Galway and wore the quaint costume of the peasant women of that district.

As the minutes passed the tension grew greater, the cries of the lamentations grew louder and the feeling of the multitude struck deeper. Many women fainted.

Canon Waters, who administered the last rites, said all of the prisoners died like heroes, walking to their death unassisted.

WIFE AND BROTHERS COLLAPSE.

When the prison keeper appeared with a notice which he posted announcing that the executions had been carried out in accordance with the decree of the courts, Mrs. Doyle, wife of one of the dead men, who had risen from a sick bed, with her two weeks old twins, collapsed.

The brothers of two of the executed men fell in a faint and were carried to the hospital amidst the murmurs of the crowd.

Large numbers of troops, supported by tanks had been massed about the prison during the night, but as the multitude increased in size the soldiers were recalled to their barracks for fear of collisions with the civilians. Only the regular police were on duty.

The Rev. Dr. Cortland Myers in his sermon at Tremont Temple on "Who Is the Greatest Statesman Now in Washington?" scored President Harding for failing to attend church the Sunday after he had been inaugurated.

5 BANDITS ROB MEN OF $3,000 AT DICE GAME

Automatic Guns Awe 30 Guests at North Reading Hunting Club

North Reading, March 14.—Five unmasked bandits, each carrying an automatic pistol, entered the North Reading Hunting Club, on Martin's Pond, stood 30 men against the walls of the clubroom, stripped them of money, watches, rings and other jewelry and escaped in an auto with loot estimated by the Lawrence police as totalling $3,000.

According to police, who were called to the scene by telephone, the victims, reported mostly Greater Boston residents, were cavorly indulging in a game of craps, rolling the dice on a large table.

Of the thirty who were robbed only the following would give their names or admit the extent of their losses. The men and their losses were:

Nicholas Tadesci, No. 125 Endicott street, Boston, $450.

Frank Katsma, No. 116 Haverhill street, Boston, $240.

H. J. Fitzgerald, No. 115 Haverhill street, Boston, $85.

Justin Moore, Reading, $65.

Louis Antonier, No. 21 Murdock street, Somerville, $25.

Louis Baer, No. 10 North Margin street, Boston, $75.

John Nagle, No. 9 Prospect street, Woburn, $178.

Stuffing their pockets with the loot the bandits left the clubhouse and walked to a grey touring car which stood outside. One of their number kept the clubhouse doorway covered, warning the victims not to make any disturbance while the other bandits took their seats in the car.

When the machine motor was started the lone bandit, with the revolver covering the doorway, jumped in beside his companions and the machine sped away in the direction of Boston.

Three of the robbers are described by their victims as being of Italian nationality and two as Americans. The Lawrence police are satisfied that they had no connection with the bank robbery.

Spending vs. Earning

AN EDITORIAL ON BUYING

THE advertising columns in these days are filled with interesting news.

Read them.

Countless facts are being printed which you'll be glad to know.

Advertising space is expensive, so it is used in a careful way. Only facts of importance and facts which have wide interest are inserted. The results are traced, and advertisements which fail to interest do not long appear.

A department store, for instance, assigns to each line a certain amount of space. The cost is charged to the department, and the manager knows within 48 hours if what he said there was effective.

Thus advertisers are constantly feeling the public pulse. They know what interests at any time and what does not.

So advertisements in general present only offers to which numberless people respond.

Current advertisements are especially appealing. Merchants and manufacturers in many lines are establishing a new price basis. Enormous sacrifices are being made in these readjustments.

And the economic history of these stirring times is being largely written in advertisements.

Advertisements are so displayed that one may pick out at a glance the subjects of possible interest.

It does not take long to read all the merchandising news about things you may desire. To overlook such facts, impressive enough to state in print, is a vast mistake.

The right spending of money is just as important as earning it.

People who habitually read advertisements pick up a great many bargains.

They keep informed on prices, on styles, on improvements and advantages. They learn of useful things and better things of which others do not know.

They live better, enjoy more and buy more wisely than the less-informed.

WIFE FIGHTS TO FORCE BANKER STILLMAN TO GO ON STAND

ABANDONS SECRECY PLANS

Rich Wife Wants to Ask Questions Regarding 5 Women She Named

By International News Service.

New York, March 14.—With Mrs. Urquhart Potter Stillman, defendant in the divorce suit of James A. Stillman, multimillionaire president of the National City Bank, in retirement, her formidable army of lawyers today began a fight to force her husband into the open and get him upon the witness stand in preliminary litigation.

The lawyers and Mrs. Stillman have begun to abandon their efforts to put the divorce case through secretly and quietly. There were indications today before it is finished the public may learn of the inner secrets of high life.

Mrs. Stillman is living quietly at her magnificent country home in the Pocantico Hills, owned by her father-in-law, John D. Rockefeller estate. The Stillman place is under guard.

For the time being the scene of legal action in this suit shifts from Poughkeepsie to White Plains.

WIFE'S COUNTER-STROKE.

Counsel for Mrs. Stillman said they would appear before Justice Morschauser at White Plains and seek to have a motion issued compelling the banker to show cause why he should not appear in open court to be questioned.

This move, it was believed, was a counter-stroke against charges made by the banker's counsel in the paternity of Mrs. Stillman's twenty-eight months old son, Guy.

If Mr. Stillman is compelled to testify he may be asked about incidents in support Mrs. Stillman's allegations in her counter-charges. She named five corespondents, som of whom were said to be "socially and socially prominent in New York city."

Plans for the defence have suffered a setback as a result of mysterious disappearance of an Indian guide, formerly employed at the Stillman Summer camp in Canada, who was said have been one of Mrs. Stillman's chief witnesses.

TO REPUTE STORIES.

The missing guide's story had been counted upon by Mrs. Stillman to refute some of the banker's allegations regarding her relations with Fred Beauvais, the half-breed who was named corespondent.

The missing guide's story also was counted upon to furnish substantial support to Mrs. Stillman's charges upon which is to be the subject of a legal fight in the White Plains courts during the week.

It is understood that the missing witness, who is half-breed, is expected to this city some time ago and related his story to Mrs. Stillman's attorneys.

Employment was secured for the Indian in a physician's office so he could be kept under watch. A few days ago when he was wanted to make a deposition it was found he had vanished.

HERO'S MOTHER DONATES $10,000 TO WILLIAMS

Williamstown, March 14.—Secretary of Labor James J. Davis said today that he would arrange for the meeting of an informal conference to settle the differences between the "Big Five" packing companies and their employes at the earliest date possible.

CRAZED MOTHER KILLS 2 SONS WITH AN AX

Chicopee Woman Then Cuts Own Throat With Knife in Suicide Attempt

Chicopee, March 14.—Crazed with domestic strife Mrs. Bertha Weworski, thirty-two years old, of No. 153 Wheeland avenue, butchered her two young sons, Frank, one and one-half years old, and Casmir, three years old, with a double bladed ax. Both sons died in Mercy Hospital a few hours later.

Mrs. Weworski attempted suicide unsuccessfully. She is confined as insane at Mercy Hospital.

Louis Shelvey, who lives in the same building with Weworski, heard the woman singing in her apartment shortly before the tragedy. A few moments later she called the children indoors. Immediately afterwards Shelvey heard a thud on the floor above him and sounds of a struggle, but paid no attention to it.

An hour later he went to the Weworskis' apartment but was unable to get in. He notified the police and Sergeant Wright went to the house with other officers. They smashed in the rear door and found the two boys on the kitchen floor with their heads split open. Nearby lay a double bladed ax.

Mrs. Weworski was found in a pool of blood in her bedroom. She attempted suicide by slashing herself about the head with a butcher knife.

BEER RULING IS RIDICULED BY DR. WILEY

Pure Food Expert Sees Boon to Brewers and Doctors in Palmer's Decree

Washington, March 14.—Dr. Harvey E. Wiley, pure food expert, speaking before members of the National Press Club, ridiculed former Attorney-General Palmer's ruling which classified beer as a medicine. He pictured the advantages accuring to brewers, drug stores and physicians.

"While I do not admit that the Palmer ruling will be upheld by the new administration, I can imagine the great gies with which the brewers, barkeeper-druggists and prescribing physicians received the news," he said. "Of the 110,000,000 people, I imagine 100,000,000 will be found among the consumers whose recovery depends upon beer.

"Then it is purely a problem in mathematics to show that the advantages will be to prescribing physicians," he added. "They charge $2 ordinarily for a prescription. These prescriptions, like some of the bottles we used to hear about, are non-refillable. The average convalescent will need a case of beer a week, so I figure that the doctors' receipts will be in the neighborhood of $200,000,000 a week."

CHOKED, ROBBED, SAYS CHELSEA WOMAN

Police Hunt Camp Devens Man After Mrs. Annie Luca Is Found Unconscious

Police of Chelsea today are hunting for John Chestnut, said to be a soldier attached to H company, 6th Infantry, and stationed at Camp Devens, in connection with the assault and robbery of Mrs. Annie Luca of No. 42 Lewis street, Chelsea, last night.

According to the story told by the woman, who was found unconscious when she had rented a room in her house to a soldier who had been a guest at Christmas dinner last year, and who had visited her home frequently since then.

Her husband and one of her children were in Worcester for the day, and she was in the house with her seven-year-old son, Albert, when the man came to the door and asked for a night's lodging.

She permitted him to have a room on the second floor.

Shortly after midnight, she asserts, while she was preparing for bed, the door of her room was forced open and she says the soldier leaped in and thrust an automatic pistol into her face. When she attempted to cry out the muzzle of the pistol was pushed into her mouth, gagging her.

The woman says she fainted over all the money she had, about $52. This did not satisfy the intruder. She was choked into insensibility and the house was ransacked.

Albert, the seven-year-old son of Mrs. Luca, was aroused by the cries of his mother, and as soon as the man left the room ran to tell his aunt, who lives just across the street.

Mrs. Luca was found unconscious on the floor.

ROCKEFELLER TELLS HOW TO PICK WIFE

Oil King's Son Advises His Bible Class to Use Head as Well as Heart

New York, March 14.—Any man is foolish who lets his heart run away with his head in selecting a wife, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., told the Bible class of the Fifth Avenue Church.

At the same time Mr. Rockefeller, who was teaching how to select a wife, said that there was nothing more disastrous than a marriage for money or social position.

The Sunday school lesson, which Mr. Rockefeller was discussing as honorary president of the class, was on the life of Samson. The financier blamed Samson's marriage with a woman of the Philistines for his failure in life.

"We might well pause here," he said, "to discuss the importance to any man in the selection of his wife. We may well assume that is the reason why the divorce courts of the land are so shamefully full.

"There are few things so important as the selection of a wife. How many of us have seen the lives of our friends wrecked because they have not selected the right woman.

"It is a pretty dangerous thing in selecting your wife to choose one from a foreign nation, though there are some cases where it has not proved a failure. It is a risky thing, too, to yoke one's self for life with a woman of another religion. Once in a while this goes all right, but often it does not.

"It seems to me that in the selection of a life partner, the heart and head should be used. I am saying that any man is foolish who lets his heart run away with his head in selecting a wife.

"A man should sit down and prayerfully consider how that woman and he will agree.

"Who can but look with scorn upon any choice of a wife for anything but happiness and love? There is nothing more disastrous than a marriage for money or social position. There is no life more the prey of disinterest between husband and wife the surer happiness will be.

"Let young women and women look upon marriage as a mere adventure to last for a day or two. They are attracted by social charms and blindly enter into a relationship intended to last a lifetime without having learned whether or not their common attributes would render such relationship possible.

"In too many cases the results are disaster, scandal and breaking up of the home.

"The man who lives an outward life of strict morality, but maintains that his private life is his own concern, is not fulfilling his duty to mankind. The only measure of a man's life is the measure of his service to his fellow men. The greater his powers, whether wealth, position or influence, the greater the duty he owes to others."

Curtis' Police Ruling Scored by Fitzgerald

Simultaneously with the appearance of Boston policemen on the streets in their new Spring uniforms, which include among other things a State seal on the hat, indicating that the force is a State rather than a municipal organization, former Mayor John F. Fitzgerald today issued a statement scoring the attitude of Police Commissioner Curtis in turning the department over to control of the commonwealth.

"The commissioner's attitude, declared the former Mayor, is a blow at popular government and "an infringement on the rights of the people of Boston," who must foot the bills.

Mr. Fitzgerald argues that the action of the police in taking orders from the citizens of Boston "all sovereignty" and places in the hands of the Boston police, "most of whom were appointed lower night," an extraordinary power.

"It is most unfortunate that Commissioner Curtis has seen fit to announce that the men on the force under his command come under the jurisdiction of the State," says the statement. "It raises the question in the minds of the policeman, whether they are responsible to the people who pay the bills or to some State official. The wearing of the uniform of the State does not entitle an employe to be a member of the police force unless he is a resident of Boston.

"Under Commissioner Curtis' ruling men appointed to the Boston police force will be liable to be sent to other cities or towns to help home cities or towns and perform police service, for as State officers they are empowered to maintain law and order anywhere within the boundaries of the State.

"The stand taken by Commissioner Curtis places Boston in a peculiar light before the people of the State."

Let Head Help Heart in Wedding, Says Minister

By REV. A. E. GEORGE.

The usual way to choose a mate in life's journey is through the heart.

John D. Rockefeller, Jr., in a talk to his Bible class, says it is the wrong way. He believes the heart should not dictate alone the choice of a wife. Is he right?

The heart has swamped too many men in their choice of a wife. They have found this out late in life.

To take any woman as your wife simply because she has a pretty face or pretty manners, or fulfils the mission of the heart's choice in other ways is sure to mean dissatisfaction with your choice later in life.

To use your head more in the choice of a wife is sensible, every-day philosophy. A woman with good disposition, who knows how to run through family jars with a smile and who does not nurse petty quarrels, running them into weeks or months of silence with her husband, has some head control.

You young men who are contemplating matrimony, stop looking at pretty ankles or pretty faces.

Reason out why you should marry a certain young woman. Value her common sense, her good judgment, her willingness to bear and forbear, her desire to forgive and to forget, her tendency to overlook some of the petty annoyances in life. Try to discover these before marriage. That type of woman means happiness for any man, though she may be homely in face and ungainly in walk. She has head requirements that outweigh mere heart thrills.

KILLED BY AUTO WHILE FIXING CAR IN DARK

Driver Thought Lynn Man Was Highwayman; His Companion Injured

William J. Critch, thirty-six years old, of No. 471 Washington street, Lynn, is dead and Lionel C. Soper, forty-eight years old, of Swampscott, has a broken arm and leg, as the result of being run down by an automobile, between Lynn and Salem, while they were standing in the roadway repairing the lights on their own car.

The victims were taken to the Salem Hospital after the accident where Critch died three hours later, and Soper's case is on the danger list.

Both men were in the middle of the road at work on their car in the darkness when they heard an approaching automobile. Critch, the police say, stepped forward with his hand upraised, to warn the driver of danger.

The latter, John R. H. Landregan, twenty-six years old, of No. 65 Henry street, Lynn, told the police that he thought the men were highwaymen and planned a holdup. In consequence he turned his car sharply to the left, hitting Critch by accident, and then, swerving to the right, hit Soper.

He was not arrested, but told to appear in court today.

WELCH TELLS OF INVESTING $200 FOR FRIEND

Agent Witness When Case of Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company Is Resumed

John F. Welch of Cambridge, for a brief period agent for the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company, took the stand today when the trial of President Charles M. Wrightwell and thirteen others formerly connected with the concern was resumed in Suffolk Superior Criminal Court.

Brightwell, his wife and twelve subordinates are being variously tried for larceny, conspiracy and being accessory to larceny.

Welch said he invested $200 for a friend in the company, and was told he would get the regular commission. He was induced to turn agent by Arthur Irwin, an office man of the concern, he said.

Welch said that, after the officers of the company had been arrested and the office closed, he asked Irwin what he intended to do. "Nothing," responded Irwin, according to Welch, "I am only an agent."

Welch asked him if there was any money to meet his claim of $200, he said, and Irwin told him there was not. Irwin continued, he said, that he neither knew nor cared whether Welch would get his money back or not.

Welch denied he had been a Ponzi agent. He gave his occupations as sporting editor, detective and internal revenue agent at various times.

This witness insisted on referring to Assistant District Attorney O'Neil, counsel for the defendant, as fiscal agents of the Old Colony Foreign Exchange Company.

"Did you get that phrase from the fecundity of your vocabulary?" asked Assistant Joseph Walsh in cross-examination.

Then witness and lawyer exchanged big and unusual words, ranging from three to seven syllables in length.

Psychology, physiognomy and psychic research came in for discussion, all over the dead agents' graves.

The spectators thoroughly enjoyed the feast of polysyllables.

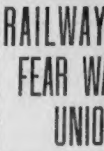
RAILWAY MEN FEAR WAR ON UNIONS

Distrust on Both Sides Hampering Wage Settlement, Declares Hapgood

By NORMAN HAPGOOD.

Editorial Correspondent of Boston American.

Washington, March 14.—In the railway wage dispute the unions have decided upon their first line defense. They have taken the advice of eminent counsel and have decided to fight on the theory that they have an equity by which the roads are bound. The roads were allowed the present rates on condition that wages should be raised to where they are now. Therefore a lowering of the rates must precede any lowering of wages, and the lowering of rates must be in the full extent of the increases permitted. Such is the theory on which the legal fight of the unions will be made.



Norman Hapgood

The difficulty in making any progress in the railway wage dispute is in the distrust that each has for the other. Labor feels that the railroads are out to do up the unions. Many of the railroad managers feel that labor will not do anything toward lowering costs of operations.

Everybody here is afraid of the subject, but it is being given more serious consideration than any other domestic topic. When President Harding had his first general consultation at dinner last Monday nothing was given out about railroads, but among the guests were the chairman of the Senate Committee and the chairman-designate of the House Committee that have especially to do with the railroad problem.

Harding to Send In Special Message.

When Congress meets in special session next month it is expected that the President will send in a message on the railroad question. Senator Cummins will introduce his bill forcing the roads into combinations by zones, with rates so fixed that the weak roads are kept alive by the strong ones. It is known, however, that Senator Cummins and nearly everybody else concerned realizes that such changes are merely last moment efforts to save private ownership, and that government control is inevitable.

Some of the newspapers have described the movement described by me two days ago as if it were similar to the Plumb Plan. That is now the most important element in the new plan, which is to avoid the delay, litigation and high cost of taking the roads under the right of eminent domain, by the device of holding company, which would enable the owners of the railroads to get out of danger before the public seizing is good. The whole conception is based on the belief that even the railroad men are now about ready to face the inevitable and welcome a smooth path to security.

Would Affect Nearly Every Industry.

Of course, it comes hard to the financiers. They have been accustomed to using the railroads as an essential part of their control of industry and finance in general. If they loosen their grips on the roads there will be scarcely a big industry in the United States on which their grip will not thereby be loosened.

In order to start with the payment of $570,000,000 to the roads, out of the public treasury, there will be a tax charged by the brotherhoods that the roads have been diverting repairs from the roads to their railroad shops with which they financially overlap do the work at higher cost. The controversies over the use of heater and refrigerator cars to favor the larger shippers at the expense of the smaller ones is fresh in some memories. If the financiers give up willingly all this indirect power, it is because they think they have to.

AUTO SHOW'S CROWDS SIGN OF BOOM

Throngs at Mechanics Building Signify Busy Season to Dealers

The crowds that jammed their way through the doors of Mechanics Building last Saturday evening proved conclusively that the automobile buying public is still anxious to see the latest creations of the American engineers—and it was not disappointed. The cars are more beautiful than ever, but the mechanical improvements are such as add to the simplicity of operation and the appointments of the cars, both open and closed models, are the acme of refinement.

There is no doubt that this is the greatest automobile show that Boston has ever seen. The attendance Saturday night was a record-breaker and the number was a record crowd far exceeded that of the opening night last year, which was thought to be the banner one of the industry in this section.

DEALERS GRATIFIED.

With this evidence of the public's feeling and the actual business transacted, the Boston dealers are more than gratified and will certainly have a big boom in business is already crossing the horizon and it is the belief of all that this spring will witness a grand revival of activity. It is a conceded fact that there will be a big shortage of cars before Summer and whatever doubt may have existed in the public's mind was totally dispelled by the interest manifested on the opening night.

The decorations of the show are a fitting monument to the skill of the artists responsible and a blaze of glory met the eyes of the eager throng that was permitted to have the first look at the beautiful array of cars, trucks and accessories. Expressions of approval and praise were heard on every side.

WIRE WILL BUY EARLY.

The necessity of the motor car has been too well shown in the past few years to need any further testimony. The motor car is as necessary to the business man today as the telephone. Where time is the essence of the contract the automobile is indispensable and this includes the field of the motor truck as well.

A wide price range exists in the market today and cars are built to meet the requirements of all, from the fastidious Croesus to the matter-of-fact business man who needs it in daily routine. All these cars are here at the show and the Boston public has never had such an opportunity for selection—but there will be many disappointed buyers if the decision is left too long.

EYE ON WASTE CUTS COST OF OVERLAND

"Willys Overland Company's watchful eye on waste is one of the factors in the company's ability to produce such exceptional quality as that evidenced in Willys-Knight and Overland car models on exhibition at this week's automobile show, at such price levels," says Weldon McKone of Cozzi & McKone, local distributors.

"Somebody pays for waste that remains waste, is one of the practical convictions of the Willys-Overland Company. And the goal of that organization is to save everything. This is accomplished through the medium of a reclamation department of high efficiency.

"The motto of the Overland reclamation department is that everything saved contributes toward the fund of energy and material which puts quality and economy into its product. Nothing must be discarded that may serve in any form.

"All burnable waste, for instance, is used in a special battery of boilers, for example, is drawn by fan blast all the scrap from the wood shops. Heavier combustible waste is consumed in a boiler, one entire side of which is lifted to receive the junk.

"This waste material is converted into power to run the big plant and coal bills are reduced to that extent."

Several fleets listed in the roll call embrace more than half a thousand trucks.

X-Ray Car a Novelty of Velie Company

One of the most novel exhibits at the Boston Automobile Show is the X-Ray car, being shown at Space 127 by the New England Velie Company.

This car shows in detail the construction of the light-weight six-cylinder touring car step by step. Hundreds of people are looking this car over and getting a real education in automobile construction. The details of building chassis and building the body, upholstering the car, building the top, building the windshield, etc., are shown in a very instructive and interesting manner. In addition to this the different processes through which a car goes in finishing is shown in a most comprehensive manner.

It will be worth the time of any one interested in automobiles to look over this exhibit. Mr. Aldrich, treasurer of the New England Velie Company, says it is quite remarkable to see the great interest shown and more particularly to note how much the public appreciate being able to get at some of the fundamental facts in automobile construction. Inasmuch as ordinarily they can only see the finished product covered by paint and varnish and take the salesman's word for what is underneath.

MITCHELL-LUCAS LINE NOW COMPLETE

"With the addition of our new seven-passenger touring model," says Fred H. Lucas of the Mitchell-Lucas Company, "the line is now complete and is rounded to suit every need. It includes a three-passenger roadster, the five and seven-passenger touring cars, four-passenger special, four-passenger coupe and five-passenger sedan.

"The 1921 models are characterized by long, low sweeping lines, and the seating arrangement is the result of careful study to give the utmost space and comfort to every passenger. There is, it is said, more room in the driving compartment.

"The Mitchell chassis has been retained in the new model, with certain improvements. In appearance, vertical lines and a shapely front apron enhance the front view. Radiator suspension is improved by the use of felt padding and springs, allowing the radiator to work freely, eliminating strain.

"The Alemite high pressure lubricating system is used as a standard equipment on all models. A larger and more efficient Willard battery is provided and a new and conveniently placed gear shaft is employed. The top of the car has an absolutely straight bottom line. The body is hung low for easy riding. The meter develops 43 horsepower.

SPLIT IN STATE G. O. P. IS AVERTED

Lodge Will Handle Patronage With More Than 2,000 Job Seekers Reported

By CHARLES O. POWER.

Washington, March 14.—Whatever their personal feelings and their personal opinions of each other may be, there is not going to be an open break in the Republican party organization of Massachusetts or in the ranks of the party leaders of the State who hold high official positions in Washington if Vice-President Coolidge, Senator Lodge, Speaker Gillett and Secretary of War Weeks can prevent it.

Senator Lodge is going to be the spokesman to President Harding in all matters of state-wide patronage. Secretary Weeks has assured the Massachusetts Republicans, through Frank H. Foss, State chairman of the party, that, if he resigns as he, it will not be until the dim distant future, and this the fight between Edward A. Thurston of Fall River and William M. Butler of New Bedford is averted. Thus also is the effort to create a Coolidge faction and a Lodge faction at this stage of the game avoided.

Speaker Gillett had a conference with the President the other day. It was rumored that he had a little list of appointments that he had determined to go over with the President; that he did not intend to be dictated to in the matter of certain appointments in Massachusetts.

Without question the busiest man in Washington is Senator Lodge. It is said that there are more than 2,000 applications on file in his office from the Massachusetts faithful.

Congressman Joseph Walsh will not resign to take an appointment to the Shipping Board. He likes his present job too well. Besides there is rough sailing ahead for the Shipping Board. It may sink into a department bureau.

WEST ROXBURY MAN FOUND DEAD IN WOODS

The body of Daniel Himberg, seventy-seven years old, of No. 128 Cottage avenue, West Roxbury, was found dead in the woods in the rear of La Grange street in that section. No signs of violence were found by the police. Himberg, who was formerly chief engineer of the Fenway Brewery, left home in the morning and was said to have had dinner with a family on Cornell street.

CREW OF BURNING SHIP SAVED AT SEA BY JAPS

New York, March 14.—The captain and crew of a burning ship, believed to be the British vessel Frieda E., were rescued on the high seas by the Japanese steamer Hotoku Maru, bound for Baltimore. Abandonment of the burning boat and the rescue of her crew was reported by wireless. The message was received by naval radio communications.

SAYS RAILROAD FARES HELP CAR SALES

Local Stephens Six Dealer Urges Greater Saving in Auto Operation

"The need for strictest economy in motor car operation, so marked in the last two or three years by not only the high cost of gasoline but also by the growing scarcity of that fuel, has been emphasized in the last few months by the heavy increase in both railroad passenger rates and Pullman tariffs," says Walter de Hennigan, local Stephens distributor.

"I look to this greatly increased cost of railroad travel to prove a remarkable stimulus to the enlarged use of the motor car for both business and pleasure.

"Take the Stephens Salient Sixes, for example. These cars, delivering twenty miles and better to the gallon of gasoline, offer not only a means of escaping high traveling costs, but, because of the remarkable power of the engine and their sturdy construction, find few terrors in even the worst road conditions.

"I believe the increased cost of traveling by railroad will have the effect of making 1921 the greatest year in motor car history from the standpoint of touring because motor car economy and reliability have probably never been so well established as in the last year.

"When one thinks of the old 'get-out-and-get-under' days of the motor car, it is refreshing to consider the development of the automobile as reflected in a trip such as that made by a Stephens Salient Six last summer in a 2,874-mile run from Nashville to New York with newspaper representatives acting as observers.

"The Stephens used on the run exactly 113 gallons of fuel, two gallons of engine oil and five quarts of water, a remarkable tribute to the mechanical perfection of the Stephens overhead valve motor.

"There was no stop for repairs or adjustments in the entire trip, evidence of the reliability and durability of the Stephens car. The fuel average on this trip was 30.1 miles to each gallon of gas.

WRITE TITLE FOR NO. 16 ON PICTURE PAGE TODAY

The $5,000 Movie Play Title Test enters today upon its "second quarter." Test Picture No. 16 will be found upon the Picture Page.

Please "write a title" for No. 16. Directly under the picture you will find a List of Titles. In this list will be found one title which fits this picture of two travelers and twilight better than any other title in the list. THAT is the correct title.

The Boston American, in association with the Boston Sunday Advertiser, offers $5,000 to title writers. The Title Test, which began two weeks ago yesterday, and which it not to be confused with the Movie Player Identity Test, consists of 60 pictures WITHOUT TITLES.

Participants in the Test are asked merely to WRITE THE TITLES.

One picture will be printed every day for 60 consecutive days, on week days in the Boston American and on Sundays in the Boston Sunday Advertiser. Each picture illustrates a TITLE OF A MOTION PICTURE PLAY WHICH HAS BEEN PRODUCED IN THE UNITED STATES.

Readers of the two newspapers will write a title for each of the 60 pictures and send the titles to us at the end of the Test. When the judges have concluded their comparisons 219 awards will be paid, IN CASH, to those who have sent in the largest percentages of correct titles to the 60 pictures. As follows:

ONE FIRST AWARD	$1,000
ONE SECOND AWARD	750
ONE THIRD AWARD	500
ONE FOURTH AWARD	400
ONE FIFTH AWARD	300
ONE SIXTH AWARD	200
ONE SEVENTH AWARD	150
ONE EIGHTH AWARD	100
ONE NINTH AWARD	50
100 AWARDS OF $10 EACH	1,000
110 AWARDS OF $5 EACH	550
TOTAL	$5,000

Every day a List of Titles will be printed with the Test Picture. How this is done you may see by turning to today's Picture Page. In this list will be found the CORRECT title of the day's Test Picture.

It is exactly "as easy as that!" Occasionally, a reader writes to us that it is "too easy." One young woman in Waltham complains that it is "absurdly" easy. We do not agree. Remember that there are forty-four pictures to come. In any event, the two newspapers have promised their readers to print a List of Titles every day and to include in that List THE correct title of the Test Picture printed on the same day. This promise will be kept. To the very end of the Test, there will be a daily Test Picture and a List of Titles containing the title of THAT picture.

Regardless of all that has been said, about not sending in titles before the end of the Test, a little girl in Holborn street sends us one of last week's pictures, all by its lonesome, and tells us that the title is "Hearts Are Trumps." Please hold your titles until the end of the Test. Why not read the Rules? See them on the Picture Page. You never will earn a $1,000 award if you have not interest enough to know the rules.

R. W. MacNeill, of Lynn, asks:

Are the "hints" at the top of the Picture Page designed to put a participant off the track, or are they meant to help him?

Ans.—Well, Mac, you may not believe it, but the only thing in the mind of the artist who wrote them was to fill the space. He wasn't thinking of helping or misleading. As a matter of fact, the lines you refer to should have been helpful.

And here's a kick from Jean Carlyle, of Main street, Worcester:

I don't think it right to print Back Pictures again. If people wanted to join the Test they had time enough. There are enough Boston Americans for everybody and they can get one if they are not too lazy. You know yourself that if you would take out the List of Theatres, for it is a waste of valuable space. Put something in that space about the Player Indentity Test.

Which merely goes to show that you cannot please everybody. One hundred participants in the Test have asked for an occasional reprint of Back Pictures—they may have lost one, torn one or changed their minds about the titles—and here comes one of the party to say it should not be done!

The printing of Back Pictures is most of all in the interest of those who, like Brother Carlyle, have been in from the beginning. But it also gives the newcomer a chance to step in on even terms with the old-timer. What's the objection?

As to the list of co-operating theatres, the way we feel about that is that if these more than two hundred theatres show a willingness to help the readers of the Boston American and the Boston Sunday Advertiser, the least WE can do is to print their names every day on our Roll of Honor.

Concerning the $5,000 Movie Player Identity Test there is this to report: The work of checking identifications has made more progress than we expected. It is substantially half completed. Two weeks more should bring us close to an announcement of the Awards.

Assuming that every participant yesterday secured a copy of the Boston Sunday Advertiser, every one of you now has all the Test Pictures down to date. The right time to make up your mind that, from now on, you are not going to miss a single picture!

It is the easiest thing in the world to arrange for a regular supply of the Test Pictures. All you have to do is to say to the newsdealer that you want both the Boston American AND the Boston Sunday Advertiser regularly throughout the Movie Play Title Test.

Say this to Mr. Newsdealer without delay. He will be glad to serve you. Remember that newsdealers no longer are privileged to return unsold copies of newspapers. They pay for all that they order. They order what they feel sure they will sell. Become a "regular!"

This Test Picture No. 17, a study in low life—this is NOT the title, now —will be printed in Tuesday's Boston American.

WORCESTER WOMEN MAY GIVE UP TEAS

Worcester, March 14.—"To tea or not to tea" was a question debated with some warmth at the annual meeting of the Worcester Woman's Club. The dues had recently been raised from $2 to $3 a year without a murmur, but when it was moved that the refreshment fees could be doubled nobody seemed to second the motion. The future of club teas is veiled in doubt.

Seeks Helen Frick; Is Taken to Lockup

New York, March 14.—A man who described himself as Morris Meyers, twenty years old, of Brooklyn, jumped out of a taxicab at Madison avenue and Sixty-sixth street. Running up to Patrolman Timothy McKeogh, he asked him where Miss Helen Frick lived, declaring he had "personal business" with her.

McKeogh, looking over the man, who wore an army shirt, thought his actions queer and took him to the lockup. After being questioned for some time, an ambulance was summoned, and Meyers was taken to the Bellevue Hospital for observation. He told the police he was discharged from the army in November and had been unable to secure employment.

BANDIT SHOOTS MATTAPAN GIRL IN AUTO

Esther Nelson Hit When Brother Refuses to Halt Car on River Street, Hyde Park

Miss Esther N. Nelson of Edgewater drive, Mattapan, was shot in the arm by a highwayman when her brother refused to stop the automobile in which the family were riding on River street, Hyde Park.

The highwayman, who is believed to have had two accomplices, stepped from the bushes near Milton street, holding a light in one hand and a revolver in the other, as the Nelson machine approached from Needham on its way home. When he ordered the party to halt, Carl E. Nelson of Gordon terrace, Needham, who was driving, stepped on the accelerator and the car sped by.

Almost immediately the highwayman fired. The bullet struck Miss Nelson in the upper left arm and lodged in the shoulder. Dr. William H. Bennet extracted the bullet at Hyde Park police station and Miss Nelson was taken home.

In the car with the victim and her brother were, Mrs. Christopher Nelson, their mother, and Lars Nelson, a brother, of Edgewater drive. The party had been to Needham.

CHARGE U. S. AID IS GIVEN TO ANTI-REDS

Berlin Dispatches Declare America Sends Food to Kronstadt Rebels

Berlin, March 14.—That American is supporting the counter-revolutionary movement at Kronstadt against the soviet regime is a report printed here.

American aid, at least to the extent of sending provisions to the revolutionists, is reported in a dispatch to the Vossische Zeitung.

The dispatch reports that a special relief ship has been sent by the American Red Cross. The ship is said to have arrived Saturday off Kronstadt and it is stated that this material aid has greatly aroused the enthusiasm of the population.

The dispatch adds that the American Red Cross expects to continue sending provisions to Kronstadt, but demands that measures be taken to prevent any of it falling into the hands of the Bolsheviks.

London, March 14.—The Moscow Soviet claims the capture of three of the forts at Kronstadt from the insurgents, said an Exchange Telegraph dispatch from Helsingfors today.

The Helsingfors correspondent of the Daily Express reported firing had been resumed between the fortress at Kronstadt and forts on the mainland west of Petrograd.

Congressman James A. Gallivan today issued a statement in which he declared that he had not authorized the reports that he had decided not to be a candidate for mayor of Boston at the Fall election. On the contrary, he is giving the matter most serious consideratio.

He returned to Boston after attending the final burial service for Champ Clark, former speaker of the House, at Bowling Green, Missouri.

A CLEAR COMPLEXION

Ruddy Cheeks—Sparkling Eyes —Most Women Can Have

Says Dr. Edwards, a Well-Known Ohio Physician

Dr. F. M. Edwards for 17 years treated scores of women for liver and bowel ailments. During these years he gave to his patients a prescription made of a few well known vegetable ingredients, mixed with olive oil, naming them Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. You will know them by their olive color.

These tablets are wonder-workers on the liver and bowels, which causes a normal action, carrying off the waste and poisonous matter in one's system.

If you have a pale face, sallow look, dull eyes, pimples, coated tongue, headaches, a listless, no-good feeling, all out of sorts, inactive bowels, you take one of Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets regularly for a time and note the pleasing results.

Thousands of women and men take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets—the successful substitute for calomel—not one has ever been sent to Pappapatic Hospital for observation.

Why?

Do you know where the centre of population in the United States is?

It moved way out to Owen County, Indiana.

Hamtramck?

Stockton?

Beaumont?

What are they?

They are thriving Western cities with paved streets, boulevards, country clubs, debutants, Chamber of Commerces, theatrical sections, railroad terminals, cities full of energy. Cities populated by live business men who come East for ideas and then go back West and improve on them.

EVENTS IN NEXT TEN YEARS.

What will happen during the next ten years?

CRAZED MEN IN BATTLE WITH HUB POLICE

Uniforms Nearly Ripped Off Before Two Prisoners Are Landed in Cell

Battling with two prisoners, apparently crazed from liquor or other causes, policemen of the Lagrange street and Fields Corner stations had their uniforms almost ripped off before the men were finally subdued and locked up.

Officers J. L. Deveraux and R. H. Hickey of Division 4, called to the Common, where a man was creating a disturbance, seized him and had got him almost to the patrol box on West street when he put up a fight, ripping the officers' uniforms and knocking their caps off.

At Columbia road and Dorchester avenue, a man giving the name of Emmanuel C. Fabiano, twenty-two years old, of East Boston, stopped Patrolman Johnson of Division 11, and, after applying an epithet, suddenly seized the officer by the coat and almost tore it from his back.

Abramson proved too much for Johnson, who was rapidly gaining the worst of the encounter, when another patrolman came to his aid and a call was sent in for assistance. Abramson was sent to Psychopathic Hospital for observation.

NEW ENGLAND TRADE REVIEW

Wage Disputes Stop Business Revival

Complications of a national character have cropped up and nipped in the bud a growing tendency towards stability and normalcy. Business in New England is simply marking time, waiting for the clouds to clear before going forward.

The textile plants and shoe factories of New England have been closed down, operations since the turn of the year, but during the last few days quieter business has been felt. Since New England is essentially a manufacturing centre and its products go largely elsewhere, the situation throughout the country governs conditions here.

RAILROADS CUT PAY.

Perhaps the outstanding factor in the business world today is the struggle over wages. The railroads have announced cuts affecting more than 400,000 employes, but the question is whether a settlement can be made without strikes, tie-ups and general interference with business. The prediction announced by the meat packers of the Middle West has also produced a different situation.

Then for more gloom glance at the situation in Europe. Europe was steadily recovering from the war effects and basing hopes of the future on a handsome indemnity from Germany. Germany balked, and the question now is how much the Allies can extract.

Certainly business in the United States cannot improve much while such momentous questions hang in the balances abroad. Though the United States may hold aloof from the rest of the world politically to a great extent, she cannot get away from economic connections. Our prosperity depends largely on the prosperity and stability of Europe.

The Allies owe this country in excess of $10,000,000, and the United States is much concerned over what settlement is made in the German indemnity, the European settlement and general conditions over there.

EUROPE NEEDS CREDIT.

Warehouses of the United States are full of goods that cannot be sold, industries are on part time, the farmers have more wheat on hand than this country needs, the South is carpeted with cotton, and ships are idle, because Europe cannot buy. And the rest of the world vitally needs our goods.

Finally, the leading bankers and business men of the country have begun to realize that the only way to start goods moving from these shores is to extend long-term credits. Large export corporations have been formed to provide some of this credit. That is why the United States is concerned over the settlement made by Europe on the indemnity question and economic conditions generally abroad.

But there is always a bright side to the situation. New England is much better off today than she was six months ago. Factories are operating today where they were closed a few months ago. They are still far from capacity—though some shoe plants are running full—but the worst has been passed. Money, the foundation of prosperity, is working easier.

Shoe salesmen are on their trips to the trade and reports from them are that more orders are being booked. They have taken with them the cheer that factories are operating here and it is time to get aboard.

WOOL TRADE QUIET.

There has been some let up in the wool trade, following the spurt of activity which attended speculation over the Fordney tariff measure. The vote of the bill was disconcerting to many who had bought large supplies of foreign wools in anticipation of its passage.

These wools are still coming over and dealers are beginning to feel the weight of the increased imports with the market showing no signs of continuing upwards. In fact, there has been reductions in prices on foreign wools.

Some sort of a tariff on wool will be undoubtedly passed by Congress shortly, if only to protect the Western sheep raisers, who have been in a deplorable situation as a result of the drop in prices.

In fact, the whole tariff laws will no doubt be revised upwards by the Republican powers in Washington. Industrially, the European settlement and general conditions over there.

NOLAN PICKED AS HEAD OF LABOR BOARD

Union Man Selected Chairman of Important House Committee

By Universal Service.

Washington, March 14.—A carefully worked out program of constructive labor legislation as an important part of the administration's efforts to bring about a return to normalcy in industry, which is being planned by the Republican leaders in Congress, is possibly completed.

This became known today when it was learned that Representative John I. Nolan, Republican, of California, and an active union labor man, has been agreed upon for the chairmanship of the Labor Committee.

It is not expected that much of the contemplated labor legislation will be brought up during the special session to be convened in April. The plan rather is to have the committee, which heretofore has been somewhat of a dead letter proposition, make a thorough survey of industrial conditions, with a view to determining just what remedies may be effected by legislation.

The results of this investigation will be embodied in a series of bills to be ready for measure of several sections, to be submitted to the House during the regular session which will begin next December.

While Mr. Nolan is actively identified with union labor, he is regarded as being of the conservative type, and the labor code that he will submit for consideration is expected to prove economically sound and to pave the way for a better era of understanding and co-operation between the employers and employes of the country.

LAWRENCE BREWERIES PREPARE FOR BUSINESS

Lawrence, March 14.—Breweries in this city, which have been shut down since prohibition's edict, are preparing to open and resume business, provided the ruling of Attorney General Palmer can be interpreted as making it legal to manufacture beer of pre-prohibition strength for medicinal purposes. Two of the large breweries has been equipped for the making of the new kind of beer.

FAIL TO END RAILWAY STRIKE IN MEXICO

Mexico City, March 14.—A final conference between President Obregon and leaders of the Railway Federation in an effort to settle the railroad strike has failed. The workers reduced their demands from fourteen in number to five, principal of which was the discharge of all strike-breakers. The president refused to accede.

MOTION PICTURE NEWS AND NOTES

By FRIEDA DAVIS.

AVERY HOPWOOD, who has four present Broadway successes chalked up to his credit, took enough time off from the work of launching his newest brain-child, "Gertie's Garter" at the Plymouth Theatre the other day to talk of his work in pictures and his ideas on the subject.

"It was one of the last to come over to pictures," he said, "because I felt that they were cheap, flimsy things that would never last, but when I began to realize the numbers of people they reached, it made me stop and think. The public won't accept anything that isn't good. Individually they may like certain things that don't pass muster with other people, but taken as a whole what they flock to see or get will prove a good thing in every way. You can't fool the people.

"To write a successful scenario one should be on the spot, that is, at the studios and follow the companies about the 'lot' and on 'location.' That doesn't necessarily mean that one can't write a good story for filming, but the continuity itself should be done by one who understands the ways of directors and cameramen. People all over the country are writing short synopses and sending them into the studios. Among them are a great number of good ones with unusual ideas and angles. The authors of these are given opportunities to go to the studios and talk over their stories with the directors and players, thereby gaining knowledge and experience for further work.

WROTE FOR MARY MILES MINTER.

"I wrote a scenario, 'The Little Clown,' for Mary Miles Minter not a short time ago and went out to the Hollywood studios when they turned it. Of course, it wasn't exactly as we ito it because I'd spent a lot of time down on Long Island watching them make pictures. It is more serious than my stage pieces, for I had to keep the star in mind. Her type story is a decidedly different one from 'Gertie's Garter,' for instance. Next season 'The Little Clown' will be made into playform to be produced on the stage.

"Just now there is a lot being said in favor of cutting down on the sub-titles of pictures. One example of this, and I understand it's very successful, is Charles Ray's new film, 'The Old Swimmin' Hole,' which hasn't a title from start to finish. But there's some question in my mind as to whether or not it's a good policy to follow. In slapstick comedy, naturally enough, you don't need them as much as in more serious stories. If a man walls heading down a flight of stairs you don't need a sub-title to tell the audience what he said. They know. But on the other hand, the more serious comedy the fun isn't so hilarious nor so obvious. The subtelty must be explained.

WATCH THE AUDIENCES.

"In dramatic stories sub-titles are needed to break up the story and relieve the eyes from the strain of continued action. There are certain points that must be cleared up in the minds of the audience, such as lapse of time and relationship of the characters and so on.

"People insist on laughing. That's what makes comedy so popular. The sub-titles bring more laughs, in some cases, than the action itself. Where would Anita Loos be if she hadn't used them to her films, and used them extensively, too? I'm strongly in favor of them from every point of view. When you go to the movies, listen to the audience. You'll find that the best, loudest and longest laughs are at the sub-titles."

A NEW FACTOR IN FILMS.

JOSEPH URBAN is coming to the fore to prove that there are others of importance in the production of films besides the players, directors and writers. The scenic artists, too, lay claim to a share of the honors, and, as in the instance of Urban, a large share.

Eleven years ago he came to this country from his home, Vienna, after acquiring sensational success, for his designing of the scenery for the Munich Festival. Although he started out as an architect, his interest in the theatre and his realization of the possibilities in it, led him to limit his talents to that branch of designing.

When he came to America in 1910, he was chosen to design settings for the Boston Opera Company, then in its heyday, and won instant fame for his originality. He introduced the "panorama," which nearly all the theatrical organizations use now instead of the usual theatre proscenium. Then he invented what is known as the "panorama," a canvas drop that inclosed the entire back of the stage and does away with the awkwardness of the old wings. For the past few years he has designed all the settings for Ziegfeld's "Follies" unquestionably the most lavish and splendid stage productions we have.

Now Urban is connected with the Cosmopolitan studios in New York, where he designs settings and features for the pictures of that company. When "Humoresque" was being filmed there, the information that the young violinist has "made good" with his playing in Europe was given in a short subtitle. "No," said Urban decisively. "We'll show him playing before the crowned heads!" and a $15,000 set was built from his designs showing a gorgeous court scene.

Since then he has been given free rein in the studio and is bringing out the art behind the art of the pictures.

CAMERA CLICKS

WILLIAM S. HART denies that he is to marry Jane Novak, his leading lady, and is strongly backed up by Miss Novak herself. "We're playing together in films," they declare, "and have the greatest regard and admiration for each other, but we're not engaged."

HERE'S an example of how the titles of our pictures sound when they're translated into foreign languages and the weirdness of foreign titles translated into English. "Oh, Boy!" now known abroad is translated "Oh, Main Junge." They are showing Buffalo and Bill as well as Constance Talmadge's "Ein Frau Mit Temperament" and "The Lone Wolf's Daughter." An Italian picture translated into our tongue has the cheery name, "Death Weeps, Laughs—and Feels Dull."

LIONEL BARRYMORE has signed up with International to film the Cosmopolitan story, "Boomerang Bill."

THE cast for "Experience" is being rapidly chosen, while some of the scenes have been taken, and the production is well under way. The newest addition to the cast is Lilyan Tashman, who is playing on Broadway in the Belasco success, "The Gold Diggers." She will play the role of Pleasure on the screen.

Marshall Neilan started something new when he corralled a group of sailors to semaphore his directions to the big cast he had in the battlefield scenes in "Bob Hampton of Placer."

How Teeth Show!

White or dingy—how conspicuous they are
Remove the cloudy film

There is a way to keep teeth whiter, cleaner, safer. Millions now employ it.

The glistening teeth you see everywhere now largely result from this method.

This is to explain that method. To tell you why authorities advise it. Then to offer you a ten-day test and urge that you accept it.

The film discolors

Your teeth are coated with a viscous film. You can feel it with your tongue. It is ever-present, ever-forming. It clings to teeth, enters crevices and stays.

The ordinary tooth paste does not end that film. The tooth brush, used in old ways, leaves much of it intact. So very few have escaped the damage which that film creates.

That film-coat absorbs stains, making the teeth look dingy. Countless facial attractions are marred in that way. Combat that film for a little while and see how your teeth improve.

How teeth are ruined

That film is now known as the cause of most tooth troubles. It is the basis of tartar. It holds food substance which ferments and forms acid. It holds the acid in contact with the teeth to cause decay.

Millions of germs breed in it. They, with tartar, are the chief cause of pyorrhea. Also of many other troubles, local and internal.

Despite the tooth brush, these troubles have been constantly increasing. Some have become alarming in extent. So dental science has for years been seeking ways to combat that film.

Two effective methods

Two effective methods have been found. Many careful tests have proved them. They have been combined in a dentifrice called Pepsodent.

Millions of people who have tried it now employ it daily. Leading dentists everywhere advise its use. In almost every circle, glistening teeth show its visible results.

Every home is welcome to a ten-day test. Make it and watch the effects.

Other desired results

Pepsodent brings other effects which authorities desire.

It multiplies the salivary flow. That is Nature's great tooth-protecting agent.

It multiplies the starch digestant in the saliva. That is Nature's agent for digesting starch deposits which may otherwise form acids.

It multiplies the alkalinity of the saliva. That is Nature's factor for neutralizing acids which cause tooth decay.

These results come from every application. They last for some time. And they give Nature much-needed aid in combating the possible effect of modern starchy diet on teeth.

Tooth pastes based on soap and chalk have the opposite effect. Modern authorities oppose them. So Pepsodent omits these ingredients.

You can see and feel what Pepsodent is doing. A book we send explains every effect. Watch these results, learn the reason for them. Then judge for yourself between the new way and the old.

Smoke discolors film

With men who smoke the film is often conspicuously discolored. They are apt to see the greatest effects from the film removal.

Children need Pepsodent most. Young teeth seem most affected by these film attacks. Dentists advise that Pepsodent be used at least twice daily from the time the first tooth appears.

$576,000,000 IN STOCK RAIDS BY BIG CORPORATIONS

Four stock and bond schemes involving the enormous sum of $576,000,000 have been thrown into the present session of the Legislature in the most gigantic raid undertaken in recent years by the public service corporations of Massachusetts.

If these schemes are permitted by the Legislature to pass, the gas and electric corporations of the State will be allowed to issue $168,000,000 of stock to their stockholders without the payment of a nickel by them, they will be allowed to issue $108,000,000 of bonds and the savings banks of the State will be permitted to invest $200,000,000 in the equipment securities of the railroads at a time when all the ready money available is needed for real estate loans to overcome the serious housing shortage.

In addition to the above, the water-power interests have put forward a scheme to gobble up all the water-power rights in the State and it has become known that a merger is in prospect of the three powerful water-power corporations which control most of the valuable power privileges in Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Rhode Island. One of the bills now before the Legislature would permit this proposed combine to issue at once in excess of $20,000,000 of bonds.

The first definite test of the power of the gas and electric corporations to control legislative action will be made in the House of Representatives tomorrow afternoon when the lower branch will take up the $36,000,000 capitalization-of-premiums bill. Although the hearings on all the other measures have closed, the bills are being held in the committees and it is rumored that action on them has been delayed until the fate of the "premiums" bill determines whether these powerful interests can get away with their entire gigantic scheme.

$36,000,000 STOCK BILL.

The bill on which the fight will begin tomorrow would allow the gas and electric corporation to issue $36,000,000 of new stock. It was filed in the Legislature by the Massachusetts Electric and Gas Association, of which Everett W. Burdett is counsel. Burdett is the law associate of Jacob Otis Wardell, who was known, for many years as "King of the Lobby." A recent investigation showed that the Edison Electric Illuminating Company of Boston gave this firm $50,000 in one year and that only Wardell and President Edgar of the Edison Company knew what the fund was to be used for.

The Edison Company has about $15,000,000 of premiums. It would be allowed by this bill to issue $15,000,000 of new stocks to its shareholders, who would not be assessed an additional penny for it. The Edison Company last year paid a dividend of 12 per cent. A 12 per cent. dividend on the extra $15,000,000 of new stock would mean an additional $2,000,000 that would come out of the pockets of the Boston consumers every year.

CAPITALIZATION OF ASSETS.

Another of the Burdett bills would allow the gas and electric corporations to capitalize their assets. The Edison Company has $22,000,000 of outstanding stock and its assets, according to the claims made by the company for the year ending June 30, 1919, amount to $42,897,000. Under that bill it would be allowed to issue another $40,000,000 of capital stock. A 12 per cent. dividend on that amount would be $4,800,000, which, added to the dividends on the premium stock, would be nearly $7,000,000 a year.

Under this same bill the Boston Consolidated Gas Company would be enabled to issue $14,650,000 of new stock, in absolute violation of the agreement the company made with the State when the Sliding Scale Law was passed to regulate the price of gas in Boston and the rate of dividends to be paid to the shareholders. Seven per cent. is the standard rate of agreement under the law. On its new stock issue, the Consolidated would be allowed to pay an additional $1,025,000 every year.

WHAT PREMIUMS ARE.

The premiums which the first bill proposes to capitalize are the difference between the par value of the stock of the gas and electric companies and the price for which the stock was sold in the market. If $100 was the par value of a share and if the stock sold for $150, the companies would now issue an additional $50 worth of stock. The sum total of these premiums is $36,000,000.

One of the State's experts on public utility regulation said to the Boston American a few days ago: "Users never would have been premiums if the corporations had not paid excessive dividends and there never would have been excessive dividends if the corporations had not charged their customers excessive rates."

"This scheme proposes, in part at least, to compel the consumers to pay new dividends on the excessive dividends of the past" the expert was asked.

"Certainly," he replied.

OUTSTANDING STOCK.

The second bill, which is now held by the legislative committee on power and light, would allow the gas and electric corporations to issue stock up to the amount of their assets. The outstanding stock of the gas companies, as noted in their last published report to the State Department of Public Utilities, amounts to $47,287,175, and of the electric corporations, $61,167,520, a total of $108,454,455. In the electric corporations, $141,769,048.43, a total of $246,-$77,859.74.

This bill would allow the gas and electric corporations to issue new stock for an amount equal to the difference between their assets and their present outstanding stock, or $124,113,396.75. As in the case of the capitalization-of-premiums bill, this new stock would be distributed among the present stockholders without charge to the stockholders.

Another bill, also before the Power and Light Committee, would allow the gas and electric corporations to issue bonds up to double the amount of the capital stock. They are now limited by law to an issuance of bonds up to an amount equal to their capital stock. The total capital stock of the gas and electric corporations is $108,454,455, which is the amount of new bonds which these corporations would be permitted to issue. This does not include the power companies, the amount of whose stock is not readily ascertainable.

SAVINGS BANKS INTERESTED.

The same interests have filed with the Legislature a bill to permit the savings banks to invest in these proposed new issues of bonds by the gas, electric and power corporations. Under existing law, that is impossible, the Legislature having attempted to throw safeguards around the depositors' money by limiting the character of investments into which the banks could place their money.

Another bill, this one before the legislative Committee on Banks and Banking, would allow the savings banks to invest in the equipment securities to be issued by the railroads. It was said at the committee hearing that the railroads would issue about $200,000,000 of these securities and that the Massachusetts banks "would be expected to take their proportionate share." A cursory reading of the bill, however, does not seem to limit the amount which the banks could take up.

Harding Has First Real Rest Day

Washington, March 14.—President Harding breathed a long sigh of relief Sunday for it was doubly a day of rest with him. Callers are taboo at the White House on the Sabbath.

Accompanied by Mrs. Harding, the executive went to Calvary Baptist Church, his first attendance at services since his inauguration. A crowd of several thousand persons were on hand, in front of the church doors to catch a glimpse of the President and the first lady.

After services the President and Mrs. Harding motored to the residence of George Christian, Jr., to say good-bye to the father and mother of the White House secretary, who were leaving for Marion.

In the afternoon, accompanied by "Laddie Boy," the first dog of the land, President Harding walked around the White House grounds.

ARMISTICE YARN IS PUZZLE

"Between the gray walls of its bath — no like its cradle and its coffin — lay one of those small and lonely creatures which inhabit the surface of the earth for seventy years . . . The round head of flesh and bone floated upon the deep water of the bath.

"Why should I move?" rolled its thoughts, bewitched by solitude. The earth itself is moving."

SEEKING FOR KEY.

Let this speak for itself. What do you make of it, Watson? It is nearly half of the prologue to "The Happy Foreigner," a novel of the armistice period, by Enid Bagnold (Century).

Those who have ever puzzled over a strange cipher know the baffled eagerness with which one seeks a key. Something of the feeling is encountered by the reader of Enid Bagnold's book.

Once there was a literal-minded old gentleman who ran across the lines, "Hermione the Stones, Bound in the Rushing Brooks."

"What dam' nonsense!" he exclaimed irritably. "Hermione the BOOK STONES in the running brooks!"

At the risk of being identified with this old gentleman, at least it is not commonplace. But in the effort to get away from the commonplaceness the author has labored. Here is her account of a meeting between the lovers while Fanny is engaged in cleaning her car and the young French officer is on a tour of inspection through the garage. Fanny suddenly spies him.

FACE LIKE A MOON.

"He paused, fantastic, upon the ball of the world, balanced amusingly with his feet on the slope of a golden corridor, and, hypnotized, she watched his face, bent into the form of a young moon — Julien, and yet unearthly and impossible. There were his two hands, lit in a brassy fire, hanging down his sides, and the can which he held in his left hand went out beyond the scope of the corridor. The three others hung around him like bent corn. . . . He was coming up to her; he became enormous, his head flew out of the top of the world, his feet ran down into the centre of the earth. He was effacing the garage, he had eaten up the corridor and all the car. He must be touching her, he must have swallowed her, too, his voice in her ear said: 'You'd gone forever.'"

Fanny was an English girl attached to the French army as a driver, her duties beginning immediately after the signing of the Armistice. One of the thousands of adventuresome girls, sound at heart but eager to do a man's work, with men, as the war gave such ample opportunity; gather an unfamiliar type. In spite of the love affair; showing an amiable weakness only when she would have a frilly dancing gown for the ball.

IT DOESN'T MATTER.

Julien was married, or betrothed, or something; if one had the key to Miss Ragnold's cipher he might have found out, but it doesn't matter much. Fanny, at all events, knew she had no right to him, but "c'est la guerre." It was passionate while it lasted; she joyously braved discovery and reprimand to meet him. Then there is a transfer, a long period of waiting for a letter that never came; another meeting — orders home — a parting without explanations — end of the episode.

Ostensibly a novel, the book is in reality a series of impressionistic pictures of the war area after the fighting. The love episode is a thread of plot — plot is hardly the word — of narrative, rather, on which the various pictures are strung. While the frilly dress is being made for the ball, for example, Fanny is ordered away on a two-day trip. Anxiety motive. Panorama. Characterization of the three officials she drives. Episode of buying cigarettes at a "pub" but. Return. Feverish completion of the dress. Success, ovation and triumph of beauty. Julien again. Another link in the love story.

There is, after all, nothing extraordinary in the love story of a girl motor driver and a French officer, unless it be the successful effort to avoid sentimentality. The real distinction of the volume is in the vividness of the pictures of the Babel of nations following cessation of the fighting. It is an unusual book, just the sort of book one might have fancied Fanny writing. All writers of emotional or intimate fiction must face the speculation whether the work is autobiographical. "The Happy Foreigner" particularly invites this speculation. It suggests that someone went out after "material," got it and is now determined to use every bit possible, whether revelant or not.

POINTS OUT ERROR IN WHARTON NOVEL

Some people's favorite indoor sport is searching the pages of well-known writers or publications for errors. One of these diligent seekers after false was rewarded in Mrs. Wharton's "The Age of Innocence." And what is more, the publishers (D. Appleton & Co.) admit it. For exposure of the error redounds brightly to their credit. The hero is said to import a volume of Herbert Spencer from London. As a matter of fact, Appleton brought out the works of Spencer simultaneously with their publication in London, and paid royalties, despite the fact that there was at that time no international copyright. As the zealous correspondent points out, it was unnecessary for the hero of the novel to import a copy, as American bookshops were liberally supplied with the work. But perhaps Friend Hero didn't know that.

Unfamiliar Quotations

The fickleness of women I love is only equalled by the infernal constancy of the women that love me.
BERNARD SHAW: "THE PHILANDERER."

BIG ISSUES SLIGHTLY TREATED

John Hays Hammond and Jeremiah W. Jenks have collaborated in producing a book, "Great American Issues" (Charles Scribner's Sons), a reading of which indicates that the mining expert intended taking a dier in politics and called in the college professor to help him conceal what he thinks about the great issues which confront America.

It is inconceivable that the companion of Cecil Rhodes, and one of the little group of men who brought on the Boer War, should not have some very pronounced views and strong opinions, but they are not found in the book. "Great American Issues" is well written and entertaining. Trust Professor Jenks for that. But it does not go anywhere in particular.

It mildly combats government ownership of mines and the like, but not interference on the part of the government in the great business affairs of the nation.

It also takes a gentle slap at the initiative, referendum and primary elections, preferring a "representative democracy to a "direct" democracy. To be sure the book contains a confession that the representative democracy of Washington and Jefferson and Adams had degenerated into a "delegated" democracy when, a score of years ago, the people rose and took control of affairs by establishing a direct democracy.

The authors feel, however, that this was a mistake. They are not rude and opinionated about it, but "The initiative and referendum, if frequently used, would drive from public life a large proportion of our ablest politicians."

"It must be admitted," concede the authors, "that Congress and the State Legislatures did at one time justly fall under the suspicion that they contained too many men who represented special interests rather than the public welfare."

PROBLEMS OF LABOR.

Still, things are looking up in the way of political honesty and all that sort of thing, the authors say, and it would be just as well to put the soft pedal on the initiative and referendum and get back to party conventions.

There is a chapter on "The Problems of Labor," and Oh, how gently and sweetly soothing it is. No controversial stuff. "It is of less importance to develop arguments . . . than to state conclusions reached by practical men," etc.

The conclusions reached are "that the heart of the matter is the maintenance of the American standard of living and the securing of a fuller and clearer understanding by both parties (Labor and Capital) of each other and of the principles involved." Then, isn't that nice? Shouldn't that have won a man a place in the new President's cabinet?

AS TO THE JOKERS.

Unemployment, the gaunt spectre that is now walking across the world, gets a chapter in the book. The only conclusion reached is that it should always be "uppermost in the minds of those who are working for the betterment of our political and social life." That ought to bring an ambassadorship or something.

Professor Jenks is an authority on immigration and his chapter on that subject reflects his previous exhaustive treatment of it. The high cost of living, the authors say, can be remedied most quickly by a condition of force to produce more goods. As if every warehouse in the land was not filled with merchandise for which there is no sale!

OHIO TOWN BASIS OF TALE

Everybody born or reared in Granville, O., will find interest in what might be called an interpretive history of that place, written with love and praise by Miss Ellen Hayes, former professor of mathematics and astronomy at Wellesley College. Miss Hayes is well known, more than locally, both for her academic distinctions and her lifelong interest in women suffrage. So was at one time a candidate for Massachusetts Secretary of State.

The book, which is based largely on the author's girlhood recollections, is called "Wild Turkeys and Tallow Candles" (Four Seas Company). The two divisions of the text explain the title: the wild turkey period ended about the middle of the last century, and the tallow candle period has not just been rounded out. Miss Hayes traces the growth of the settlement from pioneer days, when a colony set forth from Granville, Massachusetts, in search of more fertile fields and pastures new. The book is a study as well as a narrative with pioneer movies and community ideals thoughtfully interwoven with the narrative.

It is doubtful whether many persons not connected with Granville by birth or kindred will find especial entertainment in the volume, but as a local record it has value and none will deny its literary quality.

WRITTEN IN FIRST PERSON SINGULAR

One novel among the Spring output is written, the publishers naively inform us, "by the hero in the first person singular." Modest hero. But then, the author, we are told, "has a divine impatience with convention." That probably explains her strange neglect of the popular first person plural.

If what you eat ferments and turns sour, you belch gas and eructate undigested food or water; head is dizzy and aches; breath foul; tongue coated, remember the moment "Pape's Diapepsin" comes in contact with the stomach such distress vanishes. It's truly astonishing — almost marvelous, and the joy is it's harmless. A box of Pape's Diapepsin tablets cost so little at drug stores too. — Advertisement.

RUTH MITCHELL'S COZY HOME LIFE

Ruth Comfort Mitchell, author of "Play the Game," does her writing in a tiny "workhouse" on a hill above her California home, with a motto in Chinese characters hanging over the door, supplied by her Oriental servant Wong Gun calls the motto "high up idea for yes iiting." Mrs. Mitchell is a methodical person, breakfasting at 7 and hiking for an hour with her dogs, Trek (a pointer), and Finn MacCool (an Irish water-spaniel). She then writes from 9 until 1, and afterward rides over the hills with her husband. A typical twentieth century writer, in marked contrast to the popular conception of a literary light a few decades ago, whose desk was turmoil and whose hours of work whenever the spirit moved.

BREWER CORCORAN COLLECTS STAMPS

Brewer Corcoran, author of "The Princess Naida," is a stamp collector. He recently found some interesting old correspondence from the West Indies, belonging to a sea captain. The owner would not part with the letters, insisting that Mr. Corcoran wanted them only for their "literary flavor." He did, however, at last part with one, in acknowledging the favor, Mr. Corcoran declared that the stamps were treasures, but admitted also the "literary flavor" of the contents of the letter. It was a bill for a barrel of Jamaica rum.

ROBINSON TO MAKE STAY IN KENTUCKY

Elliot Harlow Robinson, poet, composer, fiction and motion picture scenario writer, is about to leave Boston for a stay in the Cumberlands, Kentucky, where he will complete a new "Smiles" story.

IS SEEKING FOR NEW RELIGION

For those who accept the Christian faith, as it is taught in Christian churches of any and every denomination, "The Ways of the Gods" by Algernon Sidney Crapsey (International Press) will be anathema.

The religious historian will argue that it is built upon Professor Crapsey's own private conclusions as to what is true and what is myth in the Bible. The Christian Theologian will find fault not only with the premises upon which the book is built up, but upon the conclusions arrived at by the author.

For those who believe that religious thought and religious faith have grown in breadth and vision as man has risen out of savagery through barbarism and into civilization; that religion has stumped wherever and however civilization has retrograded, and has advanced as civilization advanced; "The Ways of the Gods" will furnish interesting material for strengthening their belief. The author believes that man has made his gods in his own image from the immemorial and still continues to do so.

CHRIS FOR NEW GOD.

Nor does he condemn the practice. In fact he is crying out for a god who will fit into the present day scheme of things — or, rather, who will be the "Friend God" of Abraham to present day humanity.

The Friend God of Abraham, he says, is an entirely different conception from the War God of Joshua and the Children of Israel, but both met the needs of the people and of the times. He likes Abraham's God betters. He likes Abraham's God better, however, and says of Him: "This Friend God has done more to comfort the soul of man than all the other gods put together. When once we have seen Him, we can never be the same afterwards. He is within us and yet without us. We sit in our spell and look in His face. We do not ask anything of Him, only companionship, only to know that He is there."

WORKING MAN'S DEITY.

The God of Moses the author conceives to be the God of the Working Class, and Moses, himself, a "divinely inspired labor leader." The bringing of the Children of Israel out of Egypt he terms "the most successful labor strike in history."

He declares that "having chosen the working class for his people, Jehovah has remained true to them," but he finds that the working trought with the labor movement in the modern world is that it is without spiritual inspiration — without religious leadership. It has no god. It is not a struggle for spiritual, but for economic betterment.

"The need is Moses who will stand before the Pharaohs of the world in the name of the Lord God Jehovah, and claim the rights of labor as inalienable."

VIEW OF RESURRECTION.

The author also finds the God Christus a poor man's god. It is the waning belief in His resurrection that is bringing about the dissolution of the Christian religion.

He devotes several chapters to show that Christ was resurrected psychically. Having lived and died physically for truth and righteousness, He rises psychically from the dead and stands up in the power of His resurrection in the hearts of men, to inspire them to nobler thoughts and deeds.

He finds the human heart essentially good. Man is divine, and it is his struggle to express himself religiously that is causing the old religions to crumble. "God is no longer on His throne but in His workshop. 'Creation!' was the watchword of the old time. 'Evolution!' of the new."

IBSEN'S TITLE SUITED CRABB

When Arthur Crabb wanted a name for his new novel he didn't mind a bit that Ibsen had already used it. "Ghosts" suited, and "Ghosts" it was named. The story has a crime theme, and a mystery solved by the same hero who figures in Crabb's previous story, "Samuel Tyle, Criminologist."

Bread with Raisins is a Better Food

Forget, for a moment, the delicious flavor of raisin bread and think of its value as a food.

Raisins furnish 1560 units of energizing nutriment per pound, as well as natural iron which brings the rose tint to women's and children's cheeks.

The raisin's pure fruit sugar is in practically predigested form, so it is almost immediately assimilated. This fruit-food value added to the nourishment of wheat, forms an almost ideal food.

Send 'round the corner or telephone to your grocer or bake shop for a loaf of Sun-Maid Raisin Bread or bake a loaf at home according to the recipe at the right.

The raisin flavor permeates the bread. Try the bread plain, with or without butter. Learn what delicious toast it makes. Serve at least twice a week to break the monotony of plain bread.

Every first-class baker sells Sun-Maid Raisin Bread

SUN-MAID RAISINS

Stocks Are Irregular in an Active New York Market

FIRM TONE TO DULL BOSTON MARKET

Coppers Improve a Little and Rails Are Steady; Curb Active at Start

Stocks were up at the opening in Boston as a rule, where there were changes, but a number were altered from Saturday's closing. Trading was of small volume, and the range was narrow. The good tone was held during the first hour. Coppers showed a slight improvement. A class of packing issues were mixed in movement. Rails were steady. The market was a very tame affair during the forenoon, and attendance at committee rooms was very small. Issues to advance a point or more were Massachusetts Gas, Quincy, Utah International and General Electric. United Drug dropped a point.

Among stocks to make fractional gains were Boston Elevated, Copper Range, United Shoe, West End, New Haven, Carson Hill and Cary & Davis. Among those to sustain small losses were Erie & Pitts. and North Butte. Issues to sell unchanged in the second hour were American Telephone, American Woolen preferred, Boston & Maine, East Butte, Arizona Commercial, Lone Star, United Fruit, National Leather and Libby.

CUR HEAD ACTIVE START.

The Curb had an active start but grew quiet within a brief space. It had a good tone, however. Leaders during the morning were Boston & Montana, Eureka and Mutual. Issues to begin with gains were Boston & Montana, Cascade, Daddy, Iron Cap, Mutual, United Verde Extension, U. S Steamship and Verde Minerals. Among those to show early losses were Alaska, Albany Divide, Arizona Silver, Eureka and Sierra.

At the end of an hour Boston & Montana was up 2 cents at 70 cents, Eureka 4c at 7 13-1 6and Mutual 12 cents at 60 cents. Verde Mines had lost its gain.

PRICES RALLIED AFTER BEAR ATTACK

Steels and Oils Suffered Most in the Onslaught; Rails Rather Heavy

By W. H. ROSS,
Financial Editor.

Stocks were irregular in New York at noon, having reacted and rallied. At the end of the morning prices were a little below the best level. The undertone was heavy. There was a renewal of selling pressure in the second hour. Steels and oils were the main objectives of the bear attack. Trading was active, first hour transactions exceeding 200,000 shares. Call money opened at 7 per cent. The foreign market had a steady start, demanded sterling being up a little at $3.99¾.

Among stocks to show gains were Stromberg, American Tobacco, General Leather, Worthington Pump and United Fruit. They had advanced from one to more than three points. Stromberg being the strongest.

Weak issues were Baldwin, Crucible, Mexican Petroleum, Pan American, Royal Dutch and St. Louis Southwestern. They were down from one to more than three points. Crucible having receded the most. Most price changes were fractional.

STEADY TONE AT START.

While the market had a steady tone at the start it was not long maintained. At the opening gains prevailed unchanged, but as noon approached covering was over the list caused into irregularity and then slumped to weakness. At the lowest many issues were off from one to more than three points compared with Saturday's closing figures. Steels and oils suffered the most, but rails were heavy from the beginning. Largest first hour losses were by Mexican Petroleum and Pan American. Pennsylvania sold at a new year low before mid-morning, as did Sears Roebuck. Crucible showed the largest loss among steels and Baldwin was a weak equipment. American Sumatra receded to a notable extent among tobaccos. General Asphalt was the featured of the specialties and made a rally. Studebaker led motors up and down.

BONDS WERE FIRMER.

While the bond market was "spotty" in tone, there was firmness in stocks and showed rather surprising strength in a general sense considering the way valuations of other securities was crumbling. Liberty 3½s were weak and touched a new low for the year. Need of raising money to pay income taxation is understood to have caused a good deal of the selling of these bonds. Another cause may have been the announcement that $400,000,000 Treasury certificates are about to be issued.

Because of cessation in the steady diminution of demand for the products of such companies. The U. S. Steel Corporation's unfilled tonnage has been reduced steadily every month, beginning last Summer, and independents are said to be operating plants at not more than twenty per cent. of capacity. Copper is down to about 13 cents a pound and buying remains negligible even at the lowest level attained for the red metal in seven years. Tobacco are considered vulnerable because it is believed that they will have to cut the prices and will make smaller profits. Mercantile ings have been radically reduced, and, in fact, the effect of commodity liquidation is being shown in some dismal corporation reports. The European situation is bad and war evil continues to poison humanity.

Stockholders of the Stewart-Warner Speedometer Corporation will vote at their annual meeting at Richmond, Ind., March 21.

The United Fruit liner Santa Maria landed at Pier 3, Brooklyn, at the foot of Hamilton st, New York on Saturday.

The latest U. S. Steel unfilled tonnage statement is for January 31 and shows a decrease of 1,000,000 tons for the month, as against decreases of 1,000,000 tons in January 1920.

The average yearly wage of railway employes in 1920 was $1,420 as against $1,240 in 1919, an increase of 13½ per cent. Employes in 1920 numbered 1,420,000 as against 1,700,000 in 1919. In 1913 their pay totaled $760,000,000 and in 1920 it was $2,140,000,000.

For the week ended March 8, London gold imports to New York approximated $7,650,000.

STEEL PRODUCTION IS STEADILY DECREASING

Steel production is generally a good index of the condition of trade in general and the decrease in the output of ingots is a significant sign at business depression. Production in February by the thirty corporations which turn out about 85 per cent. of the country's supply was 1,945,477 tons, compared with 3,009,189 tons in January this year, and 3,565,124 tons in February 1920.

The total output of January and February is at an annual rate of 27,981,150, compared with production of 36,540,840 in 1920, or 33,494,195 in 1919, and of 43,051,033 in 1918.

Leather Buying is Slack

The demand for leather is now so slack that it is estimated that production is exceeding it at least fifty per cent. Consumers are buying from hand to mouth, and it is figured ninety-five per cent. of the leather stocks of the country are in the hands of the tanners and the leather houses.

When we start work again we will now concentrate on the stores, etc., as it would be unwise to open the theatre before Sept. 1st. When completed, the seats, etc., will amount to about $125,000 a year net, and the net operating profit from the State Theatre we believe will be about $200,000. SOFT COAL SPOT MARKET IS VERY DULL

According to a statement by the Wholesale Coal Trade Association of New York, demoralization of the soft coal spot market still continues. Contracts remain practically intact at this time of the year are being contested to the penny by commercial buyers.

The lack of demand for anthracite coal has caused many independent mining concerns to decrease and in some instances cease production. There is little change in the export situation.

LONDON MARKET ENJOYS WAVE OF OPTIMISM

Cheered by Reduction in Treasury Bills' Rate; Talk of Trade Revival

London, March 14.—Cheered by the reduction in the treasury bills' rate from 6¼ to 6 per cent., with prospect of an early lowering of the bank rate, the market enjoyed the first wave of optimism in months. There is now talk of a coming trade revival based on cheaper money.

Government securities have hardened and home rails have substantially recovered. The market's view of the penalties being inflicted upon Germany is reflected in the weakness of French loans, but they rallied from the lowest point. At the same time the value of the franc in London was further slightly depreciated.

The oil interests are making a determined effort to stir stocks from lethargy of their bear covering, by bolstering prices fractionally all around. The Anglo-Persian Oil Co., in which the British government is a big investor, publishes a prospectus applying $17,500,000 in new money to form 9 per cent. preference shares for building tankers and improving distribution facilities.

United Fruit Earnings

According to a local financial publication the United Fruit Co. is expected to earn during the March quarter $6 per cent, more than the dividend requirement of $2 a share for the period, although it is the poorest season for earnings of an ordinary year. In fact, its earnings are expected to total $3,000,000. Passenger traffic on the company's boats is 260 per cent. ahead of a year ago.

Few Bank Failures

Only five national banks out of the 8,019 in the country became insolvent last year. During 1919 there was only one to fail. National bank earnings increased from $62,981,810 in 1900 to $252,082,000 for 1920, a gain of almost 400 per cent. Capitalization increased from $403,356,350 to $1,320,781,000, or about 108 per cent.

Lake Copper Production

Copper production in the Lake district in 1920 fell just now The February output by Calumet & Hecla was but 24,194 pounds, that of Allouez 1,843,000 and of Isle Royale 453,200, or a total of 7,396,054 for the three.

Print Cloth Sales Small

There was so little demand for print cloths in the Fall River market last week that sales are estimated to have totaled not more than 50,000 pieces.

BRAVES ARE GIVEN FIRST REAL TASTE OF SPRING TRAINING

DOUBLE SESSION IN ORDER

Manager Mitchell Has Entire Squad on the Field—New Men Show Up Well

By NICK FLATLEY

Galveston, Tex., March 13.—Real Spring training for the Braves was inaugurated today at Gulf Side Park, where Manager Mitchell put his whole squad through an hour's batting practice and a general limbering up session.

Both the infielders and outfielders are beeu arriving in flocks, and the last couple of weeks will see a hot time for regular jobs.

Infielders are a bit scarce, but there's more than enough outfield talent. Some ten athletes will scrap for three jobs and picking the regulars isn't going to be any sort of a soft cinch.

Four of the new men, Southworth and Nicholson of the Pirates, Archdeacon from the Sally League and one of the Texas circuit, are rated highly by the scouts et al as the boys who were regulars all season, and it would not be at all surprising if the Braves started soon with three perfect strangers during the outposts.

STECHER SURE HE CAN DOWN ZBYSZKO

Mat Rivals in Comeback Bout for Chance at Title-Holder

New York, March 14—For the first time since the late Frank Gotch and George Hackenschmidt met in Chicago for the international wrestling championship, two grapplers of world-wide reputation will be pitted against each other tonight in a catch-as-catch-can competition, when Joe Stecher of Omaha, formerly champion of the world, meets Stanislaus Zbyszko of Poland in a finish match at the Seventy-First Regiment Armory.

It will be a "comeback" attraction for each man. Stecher is making a second fight to regain the title he lost to Ed. "Strangler" Lewis in New York a few months ago and Zbyszko the forty-year-old veteran is striving to regain the prestige he held before he went to war in the long six years ago. Each man reports in perfect trim for a gruelling effort.

Supporting Stecher and Zbyszko is an interesting card. In the other main John Doyle, who astonished the spectators by his defeat of Lewis a few weeks ago, will meet Tommy Draus, who also gained fame by disposing of Lewis in another recent match.

Jim Londos the Greek champion, and regarded as the most promising of the younger wrestlers, will meet Farmer Bailey. Bailey recently gave Champion Lewis the bout of his career in western New York and should drive Londos to the limit.

In the opener Alexander Gedlund will meet Emil Hinsz. Both are recent graduates of the amateur ranks. They are eight heavyweights.

RAY UNABLE TO COMPETE IN A. A. U. TITLE GAMES

Chicago, March 14.—Jole Ray, the national one-mile and 1,000-yard champion in the National American Athletic Union, officials that he will not be able to defend his title in the national championships next Saturday night in the Twenty-second Regiment Armory.

The London witch he strained in a race in Chicago a fortnight ago was merely a return of the leg trouble he picked up at the Olympic games in Antwerp last Summer. He believes, however, that he will be all right again after a long rest and hopes to be in shape to compete in the outdoor championships next Summer.

SPORT EDITORIAL

Sport Follows the Flag.

WHEREVER, however, they are situated, Americans must have their sport.

A letter from an army officer stationed on the Rhine with our small Army of Occupation, gives details of a great boxing tournament just completed there.

In the Summer the soldiers play baseball in Germany, in the Fall, football. They played these games within sound of the German guns during the war.

The troops in far away Siberia indulged in sport with only a few stolid peasants as spectators. Pershing's Punitive Expedition, gray with the dust of the Chihuahua deserts, stopped at every water hole and pitched a game of baseball.

Sport follows the flag.

The American soldier has sketched his diamonds and his gridiron and erected his rings in China, the Philippines, Guam, the Canal Zone, and all over Europe.

We may not be remembered by any conquests, or by the size of any indemnities we have demanded, but the children of the lands where the Stars and Stripes have fluttered in the breezes will learn of the American through the games with which they amuse themselves in the years to come.

Stories of Famous Fights

—When McCoy Walloped Placke—

This is the forty-eighth of a series of "Old-Time Fights," written by authorities on pugilism who were famous in their day. Others will follow. Today we give you the story of Kid McCoy's easy victory over Herr Placke. McCoy won after forty seconds of fighting at the second round. This one-sided bout was fought in Philadelphia, April 5, 1904.

By ROBERT CARTER

Clark Ball's hope, Herr Placke, the giant Hollander, showed what he couldn't do when placed against that boyish looking veteran of the prize ring, Kid McCoy. It took just a round and forty seconds to definitely place Herr Placke among those who look like fighters and are not.

After being hammered mercilessly, the big fellow, bathed in tears, refused to continue. The men had hardly put up their hands when it was seen that, huge as the Dutch lumber looked, he was as unfamiliar to the squared circle as a sailor is to Fifth avenue.

Then the second round. Placke's finish was only forty seconds off. The Kid came from his corner quickly, falling into his peculiar crouch. Placke, bewildered, threw out a shower of swings which struck only air.

The wily Kid waited to and a blow that would settle his man. He hooked a quick left to the stomach, and the effects of the work of Placke's seconds vanished. Over went the right to the jaw. The giant staggered back. It was pitiful to see this great bulk of flesh bruised, cut, slashed blubbering like a child.

It was impossible to believe that this man had ever been a fighter. The savage ethics of the ring unmanned him completely.

The sneer on the Kid's face deepened. It was full of contempt. He showed no mercy. He stepped in close and batted the big man on the ear with his right. Placke's head wobbled, his great arms were helpless at his sides.

McCoy's finishing blow was a straight left fair between the eyes. He toppled the giant against the ropes like a big tree felled. The giant had no heart to go further. He went to his knees wilfully, and, like a whipped child, covered his eyes and bleeding face with his left hand and wept.

INTERNATIONAL OPENS SEASON ON APRIL 20

The International League has completed its schedule, revised following the transfer of the Akron franchise to Newark. The season will open April 20 and close September 25. The newly-formed circuit is perhaps the most compact one the league has ever had, and it is believed that the return of Newark to the organization will prove to be a profitable move. The old-time rivalry between Jersey City and Newark will be revived. These teams will also entertain clubs for the opening skirmish. Buffalo will start the campaign at Jersey City, while Syracuse will play at Newark. The other opening games will be Toronto at Baltimore and Rochester at Reading.

Getting Out the Old Kalsomine Kan

In spite of all the hue and cry he fans, managers, magnates and others following the recent baseball scandal, even [illegible] points to a nice, neat little job of whitewashing for everybody concerned.

TAD, the cartoonist, a talk made of the sojourn down in New Orleans and it must be some town. Here a few things he says about it.

New Orleans is a big joint. They have big things down here. They've got a big river, big buildings in the streets, they're building the Hibernian bank, the biggest building south of New York, and they grow big frogs.

A frog leg here resembles a small leg of lamb. What they feed them on and where they grow is a mystery. If they grow in the swamps then the swamps are the biggest in the world.

After jamming an order of frog legs you'd be willing to bet that they came from the Gulf of Mexico.

If the legs are any tip off as to the size of the frog, then it's a man's battle to catch them.

A frog hunter must be brave indeed.

[illegible] of these birds [illegible] the natives hold on a hunter and the latter's a goner.

"FOR LOVE" A Absorbing Romance by Ruby M. Ayres

Philip Loves One Girl; Will He Marry Another to Save Fortune?

Part I.

THE bedroom door opened and closed again with a slam as Philip Winterdick—an immaculate figure in white flannels—came out on to the landing, paused a moment to light a cigarette, and then went on down the wide staircase two at a time.

It was about 5 o'clock on a hot Summer's afternoon, and the big hall of the old house looked invitingly cool and restful, with its dark oak and polished floor, but young Winterdick passed through it without a glance and went an eagerly to the open front door and the glare of sunlight outside.

He was a fine-looking young fellow, tall, long-limbed and square-shouldered, with the clean-cut, stalwart look of health about him which he had inherited from his father, the father of whom he suddenly thought as he stepped out into the sunshine, and with a little exclamation he turned and went back into the house, pushing open a closed door on the right and thrusting his head round.

"You there, guv'nor?"

"Yes, Phil."

Phil pushed the door wider and went in.

"Sorry to bother you if you're busy—but I forget to tell you that I'm overdrawn at the bank—beastly nuisance! The manager fellow wrote me quite a cheesy letter about it this morning—confounded cheek, I call it! Anyone would think he was afraid he wouldn't get his money."

His walked over to the fireplace and looked at his handsome reflection in the glass which hung above it.

"You might jolly well tell him off when you pay in for me," he said again, intent on the readjustment of his tie.

Struck by Silence

The man at the table did not answer, and, struck by his silence, Philip swung around.

"Anything the matter, guv'nor?"

"No, my boy—no, no."

The hastiness of the answer might have made a more observant person suspicious, but Philip was not observant. He had never had any need to be in the eight and twenty years of his life, which had run so smoothly and happily that he had hardly realized how swiftly they had fled.

He turned on his heel now, and sauntered to the door.

"Well, you'll see to it for me, won't you?"

The grey of the man at the table followed the tall young figure wistfully.

"Yes, I'll see to it—I'll see to it, my boy—and, Phil, where are you going?"

Philip glanced back over his shoulder.

"To the Denisons'—they've got a rotten tennis party."

Philip adored tennis, but he always spoke disparagingly of things he adored.

The older man's handsome face broke into a sudden smile.

"Good—glad to hear it," he said heartily. "Decent people, the Denisons; very decent people.

Phil raised his brows.

"Thought you didn't like 'em," he said amazed.

"Not a bit. But personally I always liked old Dennison—thoroughly decent fellow. Well, well—run along—don't keep me from my work."

There was little perplexed frown between his son's eyes as he went out; he was quite sure that he had never before heard his father say that he liked old Dennison; as a matter of fact, he did not like him himself, and it was certainly not for the Denisons' sake that he was going to the house this afternoon, but because Kitty was to be there—and Kitty . . . well, Kitty was topping!

He hastened his steps, cut across the lawn and went out on to the scorching high road.

He wondered if he would have the luck to get Kitty to himself, or if he . . . He swung round sharply as some one spoke his name with a smothered laugh.

"Phil! Are you waiting for a wager?" And there was Kitty beside him.

His hot blood rushed to young Winterdick's face. He took her hand eagerly.

"Kitty! I was racing off to get to you, and I've missed you. What luck!" He glanced at her frock, a filmy creation of lace and muslin. "I say, aren't you going to play?" he asked, disappointedly.

She shook her head, she made a little grimace.

She Teased Him

"It's too hot, and I hate getting untidy; and besides, you know I can't play properly."

"What does that matter? I wanted to play with you——"

He was undisguisedly disappointed; his face fell.

She touched his arm with the tips of her white fingers.

"Never mind, we can sit out together, can't we? Oh, don't, someone will see us." He let her hand go instantly; he walked on with great dignity for a few steps.

Kitty Arlington looked up at him, and a little smile crept into her eyes.

"You'll have Eva Dennison to play with," she said teasingly. "She's a splendid player, in every way—she serves as well as you do."

"I don't want to play with her—I don't like her—she isn't my sort at all," said Philip grumpily.

She pretended to be surprised.

"Not your sort? Then why ever are you going to her house?"

"Because you are," came the blunt answer. "Because—oh, confound it, Kitty, you know!" Just overtaken them and slowed down.

Several girls in white frocks, packed happily in the one seat, called a greeting to them.

"Are you going to the Denisons? Can we give you a lift?"

Young Winterdick laughed.

"A lift! Why you're packed like sardines already. I—oh, all right, I don't mind"—as Kitty, who had declared that she was tired out and was not going to walk any further.

So they both packed in somehow, and Philip had no chance to speak to Kitty again till they reached the Denisons'.

Whatever the Winterdicks thought of their nearest neighbors, the Denisons had an undisputable love of garden.

Philip had looked forward to an afternoon spent on the shady lawns or in the flower gardens with Kitty Arlington, but there were so many other people who wanted to talk both to him and to her, and presently he found himself the width of the lawn away from her.

Bitter Disappointment

It was a bitter disappointment. He had made up his mind to ask her to marry him that afternoon. She was so everything he wanted—so dainty—such a lady—so, . . . He'd been quite honest to himself probably have added in his mind that she was so everything that was different to Eva Dennison, and even as the comparison was passing through his thoughts Eva herself crossed the lawn and came up to him.

"Will you play with me, Mr. Winterdick?"

He roused himself with a start and turned.

"Delighted," he said, absently. "I'm afraid you'll find I'm a bit off form today, but——"

"You are always a splendid player," she said.

She glanced up at him and quickly away again with a little cloud in her eyes. She knew quite well that he was wishing he could have had Kitty for a partner—Kitty, who hit most of the balls up in the trees, Kitty who could not run because she was in high-heeled shoes, Kitty who hated getting hot and ruffled.

She walked across the lawn beside him silently swinging her racquet. She was tall—her head reached the level of young Winterdick's stalwart shoulder—and gladerly built. She wore the severest of white skirts and a business-like canvas blouse, cut short at the sleeves, and her arms were slightly tanned by the sun, and there was the faintest powdering of freckles on her face. She was fatless, and her thick brown hair was rather severely dressed in a simple coil, though round her forehead it had escaped a little, and curled childishly.

She was something better than pretty, so a disinterested onlooker would have said; something infinitely better than the pink-and-whiteness of Kitty Arlington; something that betrayed attention by the frankness of the grey eyes and the firmness of the rather wide mouth.

Looked Rather Grave

Just now she was looking rather grave, but when she smiled her whole face lit up as if by magic and a fascinating dimple made its appearance.

But Philip had no eyes for dimples that were not to be seen in Kitty's face. He could be bored tennis, he played badly and lost the set.

"I'm sorry"—he looked at Eva rather shamefacedly. "I told you I felt off my form—perhaps we may be allowed a revenge later."

Eva stopped and picked up a ball.

"It doesn't matter in the least," she said quietly. "And we can have your revenge at once, if you like."

But Philip had seen that Kitty was momentarily alone, and he stammered out that he would rather wait, that—he was going on with a lot more excuses, but Eva cut him short.

"It's just as you like," she said, and, though she turned away, she felt rather than saw that he immediately crossed the lawn to the empty chair beside Kitty Arlington.

Something better than pretty; something that arrests attention by the frankness of the gray eyes and the firmness of the mouth—but with a distracting dimple. Her father and Philip's father have said they will marry. What do she and Philip think about it?

A man who had been one of their opponents came up to Eva.

"Isn't Winterdick playing again? What's the matter with him? Never saw him play such a rotten game."

"He says he'll play later," she answered, but she kept her eyes averted as she spoke. And under the trees Philip had persuaded Kitty to go with him to the flower garden.

"I'm fed up with tennis," he said, boyishly. "I played a rotten game—Miss Dennison is wild with me, I expect. I wanted to be with you all the time . . . let's go and look at the roses."

Agreed With Laugh

She agreed, with a little laugh; she knew quite well that he was going to ask her to marry him, and she also knew what he did not know, that she had been planning and scheming for this all the Summer.

The Winterdicks were rich—and Philip was an only son. He was good-looking, too, and she liked the thought of living at the Highway house and, having as much money as even she could spend, so it was with deliberate intent that she slipped a hand through his arm as soon as they were out of sight, and gave a little sigh of contentment.

"I thought you were going to desert me all the afternoon for Eva," she said, softly.

"For Eva!" he echoed her words in sheer amazement. "Why, I hardly know her," he added.

She made a little grimace.

"But she's such a fine tennis player, and you love tennis——"

"There are many things I love a thousand times better," he answered swiftly. "You, for instance, . . ." Then suddenly he stopped and caught her in his arms. "Will you marry me?" he asked hoarsely.

She pretended to be amazed; she pretended, as she had been brought up to pretend all her life; she even managed a blush, which Philip thought adorable, and when, with a little trembling gesture, which would have been charming had it been less studied, she put her arms around his neck, Philip lost his head, and for a moment he was near, very near, to the gates of Eden.

Kitty Nodded

"And so I can tell everyone we're engaged?" he said some time later, when things had settled down a bit; and Kitty Arlington nodded and said she supposed so; and Philip kissed her again and said that he had never been so happy in his life, and he did not know what he had done to deserve her love; and then presently they went back to the lawns, and the man against whom Philip had played with Eva pounced upon them.

"Here you are, you rotters! What about your revenge? Miss Dennison has been looking for you everywhere, haven't you?" He appealed to Eva, who had followed him, but she turned away with a little laugh.

"I don't think Mr. Winterdick cares to play again," she said quietly.

It was getting dusk when Philip got home. Long shadows lay about the house and garden, and a faint, cooling breeze stirred the branches of the tall trees.

He was whistling a snatch of song under his breath, and he felt extraordinarily light-hearted.

He was an engaged man. To-morrow he was going up to London to buy the finest diamond ring. . . . .

"If you please, sir, the master would like to speak to you—he is in the library, sir."

Philip woke from his dreaming with a start.

"Oh, all right. . . ."

Felt Bashful

He felt absurdly bashful as he crossed the hall and opened the library door. He wondered what they would say, this father and mother of his, who had both always been such sticklers for birth and "good blood." Well, they could have no objection to Kitty on that score, at all events—her pedigree was longer than his own, in spite of the fact that her ancestors had been a somewhat shady and impecunious lot. She was a lady to her finger-tips, bless her! What a shrewish she would make for the Highway House. His mother would be pleased, he was sure. He shut the door behind him with a little nervous slam.

"Baker said you wanted me," he began, then stopped. His father and mother were both in the room, and his mother . . . not crying, surely?

He took a quick step forward and stood beside her

"What is it? What has happened? Mother . . . ."

But it was his father who answered, his father who spoke in a voice broken by emotion and rough with feeling

"It's ruination, Phil, that's what it is, my boy."

"Ruination!" The young man stared. "What on earth——" He tried to laugh. "Guv'nor, what are you talking about? Mother——"

"It's the truth, my boy." The old man had walked over to the window now, and stood staring into the garden with eyes that saw more acutely than ever before its beauties of his home which perhaps would soon be his no longer, and suddenly his enforced calm broke and he flung up his clenched hands with a groan.

"After all these years. Nobody but a Winterdick has ever lived at the Highway House——"

It was that cry which told Philip the deadly earnestness of it all, a sudden feeling of weakness came over him; he clenched his hand on the back of his mother's chair.

"Ruination!" It was an ugly word.

He stammered out that it was a mistake, of course it must be a mistake—there was a way of putting things right. Philip had played with Eva pounced upon them.

"Here you are, you rotters! What about your revenge? Miss Dennison has been looking for you everywhere, haven't you?" He appealed to Eva, who had followed him, but she turned away with a little laugh.

"I don't think Mr. Winterdick cares to play again," she said quietly.

Harmony Glimpses "Abraham Lincoln"

How does Frank McGlynn look without his Lincoln makeup?

That's what Harmony went up to the Hollis Street Theatre to tell us and he caught the leading actor of "Abraham Lincoln" before he put any greasepaint on his face. Then he went out front and saw the show. Harmony, being a Frenchman, was not very strong on the American Civil War, but said that Lee and Grant, and Seward and Hay looked like all the photos he had ever seen of those characters, but they didn't wear very stylish uniforms.

"Ze French generals, Joffre, and Foch and the rest, always their uniforms fit like as pepaire on ze wall, and never under any circumstances do they sleep in ze uniforms like your General Grant. How he won that war I don't know."

Postal Savings as Solution of Home Building

A business man who borrowed money from his patrons at 2 per cent. interest, loaned it to the banks at 2½ per cent. and then went and borrowed it back again at 6 per cent. would be looked down upon by other business men as queer, wouldn't he?

Yet that is what a certain man is now doing—Uncle Sam. Maybe he is not entitled to be called a business man. Certainly this procedure of his doesn't look businesslike.

At the savings department in the postoffice you can deposit up to $2,500 and the government will pay 2 per cent. interest if you leave your money on deposit for a whole year.

That money is then re-deposited in banks for 2½ per cent. When Uncle Sam is hard up he sells Treasury Certificates of Indebtedness to the banks and pays 6 per cent. interest.

At last report there was about $170,000,000 in postal savings accounts. Last year the net profit of the postal savings bank was $1,616,087, but other banks made $4,725,000 profit in rehandling the same money.

A number of shrewd Americans have pointed out that if every postoffice were opened for the deposit of savings, the limit removed and the interest raised from 2 per cent. to 4, Uncle Sam could finance most, perhaps all, of his floating indebtedness at 4 to 5 per cent., thus effecting in the aggregate a great saving.

Now comes Representative M. Clyde Kelly, of Pennsylvania, with another suggestion. Writing in the Searchlight, he proposes the creation of a Federal Home Loan Board, composed of members of the Cabinet, which shall have general charge of the postal savings banks and their deposits.

He would raise the postal rate to 4 per cent. to attract hidden savings; then he would permit this Home Loan Board, through a local board, consisting of the postmaster, two experts in local realty values, and two members elected by the local depositors, to loan the postal savings deposits to builders of new homes up to 90 per cent. of a $6,000 maximum valuation, the security to be, first, a trust deed on the property, with covenants to repay the loan, principal and interest, in monthly instalments, within ten years; and, second, such endorsements as the Home Loan Board might require.

The interest rate would have to be enough higher than 4 per cent. to cover costs of operation with insurance against losses by defaults, but the prime purpose would be, not profit, but home building.

Mr. Kelly believes that a 90 per cent. valuation, protected as explained, would be safe. He may be right; he may be wrong—it would take experience to determine.

But he is certainly right in believing that if existing banks are unwilling or unable to finance the housing shortage, it is the duty of the government to meet this imperative need.

People Could Learn Much From the Despised Mule

The mule is despised and rejected of men, but like some other things at which foolish mortals turn up the nose, he is one of mankind's best friends and useful co-workers.

He looks funny, but he is not. Life with him is very serious. When he is eating he is thinking about when he will have to go to work, and when he is working he is thinking about when he can eat. What could be more serious than that?

He is a type of them that labor and do nothing else. He does not play, he is not trotted out on parade, he sits for no painter, he never larks nor loafs; he works, and when he is not working he is getting ready to work. He is probably the best worker in the world.

He is no aristocrat. He is not bourgeois. He is plum proletariat.

Though Emory Storrs said that he is without pride in ancestry or hope of posterity, the mule remains the most dependable of all the dumb creatures that toil for man.

The late war was won by men—and mules. The quartermaster-general of the army, in his report of the war, declares that the mule proved himself to be more valuable than the horse. He has more sense, more presence of mind and less fear.

He kept his head even on the firing line when all about him was panic.

The Encyclopaedia Britannica says of him:

The mule possesses the sobriety, patience and sure-footedness of the ass, and the vigor, strength and courage of the horse.

To which may be added, "and some."

For a mule will never founder himself as a horse will do. He knows when he has got enough to eat, which is more than some mortals know.

He will not make himself sick gorging on water, even on the hottest days.

He can be kept shod for half what it costs to shoe the horse.

He can pull a heavier load, keep going longer, stand more abuse, get along on less to eat and on less care than the horse.

And contractors say that for all around utility he is cheaper and more satisfactory than a gasoline tractor.

As far back as we can trace authentic history we find him patiently bearing men's burdens.

He made possible the triumphs of Alexander, the conquests of Caesar, the campaigns of Charlemagne and the brilliant victories of Napoleon. Also he was on hand, dragging the ammunition wagons and supplies for Pershing's men in the recent unpleasantness.

Prices are falling on silks, steel, bacon, codfish and hired girls, but the price of mules is advancing steadily. In the Middle West mules are about the only commodity that is holding its own in the market, and the Western livestock journals say that mule prices will probably go higher.

In all the improvements and discoveries of this scientific era the mule stands unimprovable and with undiminished indispensability.

Henry Ford and his farm tractors do not worry him at all. He was here before gasoline was ever heard of and will be here, helping build roads, grade railways and excavate foundations, when the last drop of petroleum has been tapped.

When the pioneers from New Zealand, 10,000 years from now, shall discover Beacon Hill, and begin raising crops among the ruins of the fallen brick and rusted iron that was once Boston, they will be plowing with the mule, the same patient and everlasting worker that helped prepare the foundations for the walls of Babylon and Nineveh.

More Truth Than Poetry

A Good Word for the World

By S. E. KISER

SOME men say these are evil days,
With pleasure for but few;
I'll not deny that in some ways
The grumbler's words are true.
The nightingale sings no sweet strains,
No blossoms grace the vines;
The mud is deep in country lanes,
It's costly when one dines—
But, with her baby in her arms,
Lauree has multiplied her charms.

THE scene is bleak along the shore
Where once it was so gay;
The club appeals to me no more;
The boys remain away.
There's little, since the war is past,
To give us daily thrills;
The sky is often overcast,
It's bare upon the hills;
But, with her baby on her breast,
There's one who looks her loveliest.

THE chance to save is very small,
And taxes must be paid;
We hear no cuckoo's coaxing call,
No nests are being made;
The poor look on the rich with hate,
The rich refuse to care,
But smiling Spring is at the gate,
With tulips in her hair.
And, gazing at her babe, Lauree
Makes all the world look bright to me.

NOT ALWAYS FORGETFULNESS.

The woman who thinks her husband forgot to kiss her when he hurried away in the morning may be flattering herself.

Letters to the Editor

Daylight Compromise

Editor Boston American:

There seems to be strong conflicting interests between the farmers on one side and business on the other in regard to an hour of daylight saving, thus showing the great value of a daily hour in the economic life of a community.

Why not compromise on half an hour and not change the time again next October? Half an hour in these days of rapid accomplishments is as valuable as the full hour of fifty years ago. What would help daylight saving is to stableize the time so there would be no changing of clocks, railroad schedules and so-forth, throughout the year.

I believe the farmer would gladly accept the change of half an hour which should be standardized throughout the country.

Harding's Big Chance

Editor Boston American:

What will the new administration do toward bringing about a resumption of business and industry, so that the people may make a living? No other question is half as important as this one at the outset. There is a splendid opportunity for the adoption of a constructive policy that will restore prosperity to the people. And there is also the opportunity for the adoption of a policy leading to further discontent and deeper depression. Which will it be?

First of all, the rights of the whole people must be safeguarded and protected against any attack by a few. The people demand and expect a fair deal. They will be satisfied with nothing less. It must be kept in mind always that vastly more than half of the people of the United States work for their living. Therefore, more attention must be paid to the welfare of this majority than to the welfare of the small minority that lives without working. Labor asks only for a square deal and absolute justice. It does not and would not demand more. But labor would not be satisfied if the new administration were to listen exclusively to the demand of the big interests that labor be man-handled and that trade unions be crushed out of existence. This is what the open-shop advocates are seeking to bring about, and it must be admitted that they are powerful and crafty.

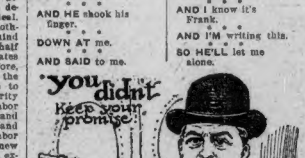
Washington, D. C., March 12.

FOUR YEARS ago.
SITTING at dinner.
WITH A group of men.
AND IN the group.
WAS FRANK H. Hitchcock.
WHO WAS in the Cabinet.
OF PRESIDENT Taft.
I MADE a promise.
TO MR. Hitchcock.
THAT SOME day soon.
I'D WRITE a column.
JUST ABOUT him.
AND I'VE never done it.
AND AWAY last June,
WHEN THE Republican party,
WAS IN convention.
OUT IN Chicago.
I WAS standing in the crowd.
THERE ROSE the form.
OF MR. Hitchcock.
AND HE shook his finger.
DOWN AT me.
AND SAID to me.

"YOU DIDN'T keep your promise."
AND THE other day.
IN THE Willard lobby.
I WAS standing there.
IN CONVERSATION.
WITH DAVID R. Francis.
AND I had a feeling.
THAT SOME tall man.
WAS HANGING around.
AND I turned my head.
AND THERE was Frank.
SHAKING HIS finger.
AND SAYING to me.
I'D FORGOTTEN my promise.
AND FOR two nights now.
I'VE HAD nightmares.
IN WHICH a man.
A TALL, slim man.
WITH A great long finger.
THAT HE drags around.
RAISES THE finger.
AND POKES me with it.
AND CARES me stiff.
AND WAKES me up.
AND I know it's Frank.
AND I'M writing this.
SO HE'LL let me alone.



I THANK YOU.

MME. CURIE IS ONE OF GREATEST OF EARTH

By The Spectator

MADAME CURIE is coming from Paris to this country next May.

By every test of intelligent measurement she is one of the greatest of the earth's great ones.

She sits and has sat upon no throne; she has not catered to the world's amusement nor added to its meretricious pleasures; she has not accumulated a gigantic fortune by her shrewdness; she belongs to no regal family "whose blood has crept through scoundrels since the flood," and she owes what honors she has to no jockeying of a clever press agent nor to the clever advertising of some astute manager.

All she has done is to serve mankind.

She has benefited the human race.

On Firm Basis

Her claim to greatness therefore rests upon the same basis as that of Thomas Edison, Luther Burbank, Pasteur, Koch, Lister, Columbus, Galileo, back to Plato, and on back into dim tradition to Prometheus, who stole fire from the gods and gave it to men.

She is not at all the kind of great person that the Kaiser was, or Napoleon, or Timour, or Ahasuerus, or Cleopatra, or any other wastrel or swollen egotist whose claim to distinction rests upon destruction.

The women of America are planning to give Madame Curie, when she comes here, a unique testimonial, a little bit of what is perhaps the most precious substance known.

It will be one gramme of radium. It will hardly be enough to fit a small thimble and will cost $100,000.

This is most fitting, as Madame Curie is the one who discovered radium.

Fascinating Story

The story of that discovery is more fascinating than any romance. The way she tracked down and finally captured the world's most valuable matter is as exciting as any detective story. It is, in fact, the most splendid of detective stories.

"No other woman," says Dr. Abbe, "by sheer force of energy and brain power, has pursued a trail into an unknown jungle, and brought to light such an unsuspected new factor in the world's makeup, which has had such revolutionary influence in science.

"No one can say that she stumbled on this by chance. There existed, first of all, a complete education in chemistry and physics, without which the first step could not have been taken. Secondly, the energy, the dominating will, the zeal in pursuit, the indefatigable working power, the self-sacrificing bravery—the same forces which made it possible for Peary to reach the North Pole—carried this explorer into an unknown wilderness."

The credit for this discovery was settled incontestably by a commission giving Mme. Curie the Nobel Prize in 1903.

PREPARE YOURSELF

If you have a certain thing to do, at a certain future date, the sooner you thoroughly understand the details of that something the better.

Do not wait until the eleventh hour to find out what is required.

It is only the bungler who puts off preparation and then gets all fussed up in the doing.

That is one reason for being prepared before the demand is made for your help or your services.

No one can do justice to any cause who does not have time to study conditions and figure out the best way of accomplishment.

When you see or hear something you like and which you would like to be able to do, why not get at it and learn all about it from the bottom up, just as a matter of interesting information?

No one was every really well prepared to do a certain thing but they had a chance in some way or other to make use of it.

It may come in the way you expect, but no real knowledge is lost.

How much better to know a thing so well that when emergency arises you can step into the breach and keep things going.

Autobuoy Springs for Car

An innovation in spring design is of the coil-pneumatic type. This is so designed as to translate the vertical movement of the axle through toggles into longitudinal pressures cushioned before they meet the frame. The spring is installed in place of the conventional leaf spring and weighs no more load for load.—In Motor for March.

FOREIGNERS PREFERRED ON U. S. SHIPS

By Nellie Bly

THE support of the American part of America will be given to the cause of American seafaring men.

American crews must man American vessels for the safety of America, and American ships which fail to employ 100 per cent., American crews must be dealt with to the full extent of the law. And American ships which do employ 100 per cent. American crews must be encouraged, upheld and patronized.

The only way America can be established upon the seas is by encouraging and aiding American shipowners in every possible way.

Here is a letter from a seaman:

"Dear Miss Bly—We American seamen are very grateful for what you and the Hearst papers are doing for us. It's about time the limejuicers and other aliens were forced to quit our ships. Less than 5 per cent. of the crews on board American ships are Americans. As an example, I may quote the last ship I was on. There was only a third engineer and two ordinary seamen who were Americans. The others were all limies. To make it worse, while we were in port in Brazil, the seamen on our ship (all limies) went to a cafe and there joined the crew of an English destroyer in singing a song filled with awful things about the Yankees.

No Help From This Consul

"So we two American sailors went, our day off, to Cabadello, a little place in Brazil, to see the consul. We were followed by the chief steward (a limey) and the captain (a Swede). When I went into the consul's office, much to my surprise, I found that a limejuicer was the consul for both his 'Great Empire' and our dear America!

"Of course, I could do nothing but endure the taunts that answered my recital. And as soon as I was on board the captain told me he would flog it right into me if I dared see a consul again.

"When we hit New York I could not find witnesses among the crew as they were all limies. And the thing that gets my goat is that before we got in the captain and chief engineer got a radio from the company asking them to remain on their jobs because there were too many unemployed in New York. So we came to port with all foreigners contracted for next trip, and we poor Americans without even a place to sleep. That ship sailed one month ago full of Greeks and limies and not one American citizen.

"Miss Bly, none of the laws relating to merchant seamen are enforced.

"Thanks for your attention.

"A real American in heart and soul."

I, like this American sailor, have found, to my shame and disgust, foreigners filling American official and governmental positions in foreign countries. Let us hope, in cleaning house, Mr. Harding will form a precedent by removing the foreigners from American positions.

Few Americans

Here is another letter:

"Dear Miss Bly—Permit me to say that I very much admire the good you have done in the past for the despondent and people in general down on their luck.

"I am an American seaman. I served ten years in the American navy, but now I can't even land a job as a seaman.

"Enclosed please find letter received from an official of a supposedly American steamship company. I was employed last Summer as watchman on this company's ships. I can truthfully state that I did not find one American chief steward on any of their ships. They were mostly all Englishmen excepting a few Japs. The present head steward is an Italian. The port steward is English. The way the officers and crews run down the Americans in general makes one's blood boil.

"I also served as watchman on other S. S. lines and found conditions the same—foreigners, nothing but foreigners. There was one captain I got to be friendly with. He was also of English birth, and when I showed him some of the editorials in the Journal he would get blue in the face with rage and would say: 'This won't do. Hearst ought to be shot for what he says about England!' We quarreled on this, and he had me discharged. I am working now for a coastwise S. S. company at very reduced wages. I am waiting for the Merchant Marine to get started again. Perhaps if I'm lucky I may land a job as messman, but according to this inclosed letter, it does not look very promising.

"Yours respectfully,

"AN AMERICAN SEAMAN."

The inclosed letter I shall reproduce without giving the name of the steamship corporation or of the official who signed it. But I quote, word for word, the body of the letter. The letter was written six weeks ago. Here it is:

"Dear Sir—Your letters in reference to position as messman is received, and we regret to advise at the present time we have no vacancy; in fact, we are putting in Japs in the steward department on our steamers."
